Single Tax On Business Urged to Aid Recovery

22 Pct. Levy Would Simplify Returns; President Asks New Appeasement Word

By Cecil B. Dickson.
(Copyright, 1939, by International News Service)

Conservative New Deal finance experts last night proposed a flat 22 per cent corporate tax, in substitution for business-deterrent levies, as President Roosevelt headed into a new fight with Congress over relief funds.

The proposed new corporate tax would replace the capital stock, capital gains and excess profits levies, which are estimated to yield $400,000,000 annually, and the undistributed profits tax.

Submission of this proposed flat corporate levy to Congress awaits only a study of the March 15 income tax returns. It is designed to simplify the present involved tax structure to encourage business.

"Short" Rules Relaxed

At the same time, the Securities and Exchange Commission, in line with the Administration's recovery drive, relaxed its drastic rules on short selling of stocks.

The modification was made after New York Stock Exchange officials and the SEC, at a conference, decided that greater freedom of market action was necessary.

On Capitol Hill, Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, said a "real business appeasement" step could be taken by the Administration by adopting his proposal to freeze pay-roll taxes for old-age pensions at 2 per cent, while Representative McLeod (Republican), of Michigan, proposed creation of a committee to determine how high the national debt can go with safety.

President Hunts a Word

Official sources voiced belief the mutual advantages deriving from the new Brazilian-American commercial agreement may inspire closer co-operation by other Latin-American nations with the Roosevelt-Hull reciprocal trade program.

The President told his press conference the compacts signed Thursday by Brazilian Foreign Minister Aranha with Secretaries Hull and Morgenthau spell better trade and strengthened relations between the two countries and brighten the world picture generally.

Because he dislikes the phrase, "business appeasement," in connection with the recovery drive, the President said he would try to produce a more suitable phrase over the week-end and suggested newsmen appoint a committee to study the subject and select a more appropriate phrase.

"Short" Restraint Kept

Secretary of Commerce Hopkins, Speaker Bankhead and other New Deal officials also have objected to use of the phrase, inasmuch as they believe it implies a New Deal retreat.

The SEC announcement on short selling said, "It was the view of the exchange officials that the modifications would provide greater freedom of market action in accumulating short positions while retaining effective restraints on short selling."

The commission's short-selling rules heretofore have required, in effect, that a short sale of a security might be effected only at a price above the last sale price.

The amendment adopted yesterday permits short sales at the same price as the last sale, provided that the last sale price "was higher than the last different price which preceded it."

The commission's announcement added, "In declines, however, the

No indication was given of the value of the estate.

Stearns named as trustees his son, Representative Foster Stearns, of Hancock, N. H.; his son-in-law, Henry W. Giese, of Wellesley, and his secretary, Miss Helen G. Moore.

House Inquiry On WPA Hinted By Woodrum

$150,000,000 Request Forecast Next Week After Seeing President

A thorough inquiry into the Nation's relief needs will be undertaken by a House Appropriations subcommittee before acceding to President Roosevelt's expected request for an additional $150,000,000 for the WPA, it was indicated yesterday.

Following a White House conference betwen the President, Col. F. C. Harrington, WPA administrator, and Democratic members of the House sub-committee handling relief, Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, said he thought the President would ask, in a formal message early next week, $150,000,000 to carry the WPA through June 30. This is the amount Congress cut from the President's original request for a supplemental WPA appropriation a month ago.

Woodrum, who heads the subcommittee, said that nothing he heard at yesterday's conference had made him feel that a mistake had been made when Congress made the $150,000,000 slash. The white-haired Virginian added, however, that he had to await the President's message next week and also the facts to be brought out at subsequent hearings before he could form an opinion on the additional sum needed by WPA.

The hearings will probably not be held for a week or more, and it was intimated they would involve close scrutiny not only of the number of persons on WPA rolls but also of the type of work being performed

New Division At Garfield to Fight Syphilis

First Department Of Kind in Private Capital Hospitals

The Garfield Hospital board of directors yesterday approved the establishment of a department of syphilology, which will be the first in any of the Capital's private hospitals.

Marking a significant step in Washington's crusade against venereal disease, department L, as the new division will be known, will provide facilities for diagnosis clinic treatment and hospitalization far more complete than any now available to the private patient, according to officials.

Clarence A. Aspinwall, president of Garfield's board, presided over the executive committee meeting which indorsed the plan, paving the way for immediate launching of the new service.

Dr. Hough in Charge

Dr. William H. Hough will be chief of the department, and Dr. Russell J. Fields is to be director in charge of clinical work. Three prominent Washington syphilologists have accepted invitations to serve on the advisory board: Dr. H. H. Hazen, Lee McCarthy and F. J. Eichenlaub.

Services and drugs will be free to those unable to pay. As a department, the work will be elevated to the same level as other departments, such as surgery, obstetrics, pathology, etc. Patients will be admitted not simply as syphilis sufferers but will be checked over for other physical disabilities, whether these are the result of the infection or not.

12-Man Consulting Staff

"This new service, the first of its kind in Washington, should have great benefits in bringing treatment to greater numbers and, especially with regard to maternity cases, reducing the amount of congenital syphilis," said Dr. Francis J. Eisenman, superintendent of Garfield.

An additional social service worker has been hired for the department. Besides the advisory board of syphilologists, there will be a 12-man consulting staff consisting of specialists in other fields of medicine.

Record Passenger Plane Flight Made in Substratosphere

By the Associated Press.

Boston, March 10.—A "flying laboratory" today raced nonstop from Minneapolis to Boston at an average altitude of 20,000 feet in what Mayo Clinic scientists described as a "completely successful" test of a new-type oxygen mask designed to make practicable substratospheric flight and aid flying at normal altitudes.

Mal Freeburg, pilot of the commercial passenger plane (Northwest Airlines) which carried 10 other persons, including his wife, said the flight was made at an average speed of 250 miles an hour for 1,140 miles. He described it as a "record" for fully loaded passenger planes flying at that altitude without "dual-stage super-charged motors."

The passengers, wearing masks which look like football players' noseguards with bulb attached, said they were "completely comfortable" as they ate a chicken dinner, drank and talked while the plane hurtled through the substratosphere, sometimes at a height of 23,000 feet.

Lovelace, one of the group which will exhibit the equipment at a two-day scientific conference on flight research at the Harvard Fatigue Laboratory, declared today's test fortified his contention the masks will be practicable for use "at an altitude of 35,000 feet."

Mrs. Freeburg, only woman passenger, declared she was "even able to powder my face" while wearing the mask, but she added with a smile:

"They'd better make it better looking before it will be popular with the well-dressed woman flier."

U. S. Checks Spread of Hotel Strike

Steelman Dissuades Engineers and Musicians From Sympathy Walkout

A threatened widening of Washington's big hotel strike, with hotel engineers and musicians joining the walk-out of the cooks, waiters, bartenders and other employes was headed off last night day by Dr. John R. Steelman, head of the Labor Department's conciliation service.

While they were engaged in conference with the Federal conciliators at the Labor Department representatives of the strikers received word that the engineers and musicians were ready to join the strike.

When Dr. Steelman learned of this he asked the strike leaders to urge the engineers and musicians to delay action. His plea was forwarded to New York to Edward Flore, president of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes International Alliance, and Joseph Weber, president of the American Federation of Musicians.

Engineers Vital

The engineers, who are responsible for heating the hotels, might not be so easy to replace as some of the other workers.

After representatives of the strikers and the hotel managers conferred yesterday with the conciliators at the Labor Department, Dr. Steelman expressed hope that a basis of settlement would be found.

Later, Dr. Steelman, with Howard T. Colbin and John L. Connor of the conciliation office, met for three and a half hours with strike leaders. Dr. Steelman said after the session that there were other issues beside the closed shop involved. He observed that the management and unions were showing "an attitude of trying very hard" to settle the walkout.

Osgood Roberts, public relations counsel for the Mayflower Hotel and spokesman for all 13 hotels now being picketed, said yesterday that all the houses are operating normally and were prepared for their peak season, which begins April 1.

"Not Wholesale Walkout"

"We can report that all hotels are fully staffed," Mr. Roberts said. "Employes recruited from other departments after the sudden walkout have now returned to their regular duties.

"It must be remembered that this was not a wholesale walk-out. About 65 per cent of the employes in the affected hotels remained. These included the key department heads, as, for example, the chefs and their assistants; the head waiters and the captains, and the wine stewards and their principal assistants. So that with the availability of competent labor in Washington and the natural influx that followed news of the strike, staffs have been built to normal size and efficiency."

Roberts conceded that the strike of the bartenders had been virtually complete, but he said hotel managers were surprised to find plenty of competent nonunion bartenders available.

F. E. Whitney, secretary of the joint board of the strikers' organization, said:

"If the importation of inexperienced strikebreakers has restored

Edith McCormick Protege Enters Bankruptcy

Chicago, March 10 (I.N.S.).—Edward A. Dato, immigrant boy who climbed to the throne of a vast financial empire as protege of the late Edith Rockefeller McCormick, was adjudged bankrupt today.

Listing assets of a wrist watch, his personal wearing apparel, another watch and his library, with an aggregate value of $275, Dato gave inventory liabilities totaling $1,352,342. These latter consisted of obligations incurred personally while a partner of Edwin D. Krenn, another protege of Mrs. McCormick.

Under the influence of Mrs. McCormick's millions, the Krenn & Dato firm became one of the Nation's largest realty subdividers and financed bank buildings, hotels and skyscrapers from coast to coast. Their bubble burst in 1932.

British Retake Ship From Franco

Two Destroyers Force Nationalists To Free Vessel Seized Off Valencia

By the Associated Press.

London, March 10.—A British freighter seized in Franco's new blockade of Spanish loyalist waters was freed tonight after two British destroyers rushed to her aid.

The admiralty announced the freighter Stangate had been liberated by nationalist warships which took her prisoner under the blockade announced Wednesday, and was being escorted to Gibraltar by the destroyer Intrepid.

An admiralty spokesman added he had no further details except that "there was no trouble in escorting the Stangate away and no shots were fired."

Britain warned yesterday she was prepared to defend her merchantmen from any attacks without proper warning by nationalist vessels.

Calls for Aid

Lloyds radio station at Land's End had intercepted a message from the British vessel Bellwyn addressed to "all stations" and "any British warship," asking assistance for herself and the Stangate.

The message said the vessels were 23 miles off Cape San Antonion, south of Valencia, where they had been ordered by a nationalist warship to proceed to Gibraltar. A subsequent message from the Bellwyn said:

"The Bellwyn refused to submit and is now left alone. Please rescue the Stangate. Being taken to Palma."

Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax yesterday warned Gen. Franco that "if action is taken" against British shipping, "the British government would be obliged to resist."

The Stangate was outward bound from Valencia where she had unloaded a cargo of foodstuffs yesterday after running the nationalist blockade. The destroyers which were sent to her aid were the Intrepid and the Impulsive.

Madrid Reds Surrounded

Madrid, March 10 (AP).—Mobile units of the republican army rolled into Madrid today and began blasting out Communists revolting against the regime of Gen. Jose Miaja and his program of a "worthy peace" with Gen. Franco.

Bringing into action tanks, mortars and field guns, the army sliced through and surrounded Communist emplacements in the neighborhood of the old bull ring on Madrid's east side.

The rebellious forces relied chiefly on hand bombs, but were unable to cope with the weapons of the forces called into action by Gen. Miaja's embattled government.

The number of casualties was unknown, but an official announcement said 14,000 of the rebellious soldiers had surrendered since yesterday.

[Gen. Miaja and Col. Segismundo Casado, leaders of the Madrid "peace with honor" council, today agreed to an unconditional surrender to Gen. Franco to be effected as soon as the present Communist and anarchist uprising is put down, In-

Firemen Rescue Pigeon From Flue At Longworth's

A half-grown pigeon yesterday dared death, and nearly found it, on his first attempt to fly.

The pigeon tumbled down the kitchen chimney at the home of Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, daughter of the late President Theodore Roosevelt, at 2009 Massachusetts avenue northwest.

Mrs. Longworth heard the noise of the fall, and called the fire department. Capt. J. A. Mayhew, of the rescue squad, removed a ventilator, and pulled the bird to safety.

Mrs. Longworth gave the bird to Capt. Mayhew, who said he would keep it as a pet.

White House Help Must Submit to Fingerprinting

Cabinet members and big shots in the Government will fall victim to an epidemic of inky fingers in the next few days if a program announced yesterday by President Roosevelt to popularize fingerprinting goes through. The President announced White House personnel would be printed and expressed the hope the example would be followed in other departments.

Rumors that yesterday's order resulted from a series of petty pilferings within the White House were denied

U. S. Naval Aide And Russian Guilty as Spies

Federal Jury Acquits Mrs. Gorin of Same Charge on Coast

By the United Press.

Los Angeles, March 10.—Mikhail Gorin, Western representative for the Soviet Intourist Agency, and Hafis Salich, former United States naval intelligence attache, were convicted tonight of espionage by a Federal jury. Mrs. Gorin, jointly indicted, was acquitted.

Guilty On 3 Counts

Gorin and Salich were found guilty on all three counts in the indictment—two of peace-time espionage and one of conspiracy. It was on the latter, the only one on which she was tried, that the blond wife of Gorin was freed.

The penalty for the two men is a possible maximum of 42 years in prison. In war time they might be sentenced to death.

The decision was based on instructions from Judge Ralph E. Jenney, who criticised the 1917 espionage act and said it should be revised and brought up to date.

Salich, Russian-born American, was accused of selling naval secrets from the San Pedro Intelligence Bureau to Gorin for transmission to Moscow.

The jury was out 2 hours and 10 minutes.

"Common Enemy"

The confidential information, Salich said, concerned Japanese activities. He pleaded that Japan was a "common enemy" of the United States and Russia and that he had conveyed nothing that damaged United States defense.

Salich was the only one of the defendants who testified. He denied having any intent to injure the United States and insisted that $1,700 which Gorin gave him was "only a loan" he intended to repay. He testified that all his dealings with Gorin were with knowledge of his superiors and associates in the Naval Intelligence Bureau.

Federal Prosecutor Benjamin Harrison said Salich revealed 69 files of confidential data to Gorin.

Gorin received the verdict stoically. His wife paled slightly but otherwise showed no emotion.

Labor Rider Blocks Action On Defense

Conference Refers Amendment Back To Barkley, Author

Meeting strong House opposition to the labor rider to the defense bill, Senate conferees sought last night to avoid a deadlock by referring the amendment back to its sponsor, Senate Majority Leader Barkley.

Adjourning after a second day of fruitless negotiation to settle differences and speed the air expansion bill to enactment, it was revealed the group will await Barkley's return from Florida on Monday before proceeding with the bill. Finding that organized labor is solidly behind the demand for collective bargaining guarantees from firms producing armaments, and that the War Department and industry are opposing it, the committee hopes that the Senate leader will consent to drop or modify it rather than block the arms measure.

Before leaving Washington Thursday night, Barkley asked Senate conferees to hold out for the amendment, Senator Logan (Democrat), of Kentucky, revealed. The committee has also been told by Secretary of War Woodring that it and other Senate amendments "will endanger, if not make impossible" the success of the whole defense program.

Meanwhile, discussion of several phases of American foreign policy took place in Congressional and Administration circles. Foreign policy and defense developments were:

The Spanish question came to the front as Undersecretary of

U. S. Orders Enough Red Tape To Get Around Any Emergency

The Procurement Division of the Treasury Department has ordered 8,584,704 inches of red tape for another year's business.

Each of 132 Federal agencies will get 1 mile of red tape for its own use if the apportionment is on a share-and-share-alike basis. That would leave 3 miles of stripe for a rainy day or new-born bureaus.

Bids on the red tape—which would stretch from the Capitol Dome to the Liberty Bell in Philadelphia—will be opened March 17.

The Treasury Department announcement states only that the tape will be used for "Federal purposes." If each "purpose" requires one foot of ribbon, the Government is set to handle 715,332 "purposes" next year, disregarding red tape salvaged from last year's purposes."

And what kind of tape is official red tape? Procurement Division Order No. 5490-S, announcing the bids, demands "3,312 spools of tape, red, cloth, linen finish, 72 yards to a spool, six spools to a box, 12 boxes to a carton." Delivery is to be made May 2 "to Washington."

Thus, the more the Government reorganization committees cut the number of Federal agencies, the more red tape will be left for each agency.

On the other hand, if President Roosevelt should kill 30 or 40 agencies, under powers which may be given him if his reorganization bill is passed, there could be enough of this tape left over at the end of the year to tie up the cotton and wheat surpluses.

Hitler Calls Emergency Session on Slovak Plea

Summons His Aides From Supper to Draft Strong Note; Rioting Resumed

Copyright, 1939, by International News Service.

Berlin (Saturday), March 11.—Chancellor Hitler met with his highest advisers early today in an emergency session called by the Reichsfuehrer to deal with the crisis born of the strife between the Czechs and Slovaks in dismembered Czecho-Slovakia.

The German dictator brought cabinet ministers and other governmental aides scurrying to the Chancellory where the extraordinary meeting began at midnight.

The immediate subject for consideration was a note dispatched to Berlin by the semiautonomous Slovakian government which was deposed by the Prague regime yesterday. It was understood the note contained an appeal for Germany's intervention to restore and protect the status of the ousted Slovakian "independence" leaders.

Plan Vigorous Answer

Hitler and his lieutenants were apparently determined to respond to the Slovakian appeal wth a vigorous answer that undoubtedly will lay down the law to Prague.

The possibilty was forseen that Hitler's reply might in some sense partake of the nature of an ultimatum to the Prague government, the power of which has been reduced since Germany acquired the Sudetenland under the Munich pact.

It was asserted in German circles that the German government would under no circumstances recognize any Slovakian government imposed on the Slovaks by the Czechs.

In the best-informed diplomatic quarters it is believed that the Czechs will, under Germany's pressure, bow to the Slovak demands for greater autonomy and other concessions. Failing to do so would almost certainly create an impasse approaching that of last September in its danger to European peace.

Session Called Hurriedly

The gravity with which Hitler viewed the outbreaks in Slovakia occasioned by the Czech-Slovak dispute was reflected in the unexpected suddenness with which he summoned his special council into session.

Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop and other cabinet ministers were dining late last night in a downtown club when messengers brought them word they were to appear at Hitler's chancellory at midnight.

Four Gendarmes Killed

Prague, March 10 (I.N.S.).—In the most serious incident yet produced by the warfare between Czechs and Slovaks, four Czech gendarmes were reported killed tonight when armed members of the Hlinka autonomist Slovak guard executed a fierce counterattack on their own headquarters in the town of Ruzomberok.

The Slovak band attacked the headquarters after the building had been seized and occupied by Czech police. Advices reaching Prague shortly before midnight tonight indicated the Slovak counterattack was repulsed with several casualties.

Home Town of Hlinka

The seriousness of the incident was emphasized by the fact that Ruzomberok is the home town of the late Father Hlinka, founder of the post-war Slovak independence movement.

Fresh street fighting broke out tonight in Pressburg as Czech authorities, after declaring martial law in Bratislavia and other Slovakian cities, hoped for a peaceful settlement of a Slovak uprising. The objective of the rebellion was reported to be the secession of the semiautonomous state of Slovakia and its union with the Nazi Reich.

In the new outbreak one Slovak

Kindler Glad Players Took Cut in Weeks

Suggestion They Put Money Above Art Is Refuted, He Asserts

Action of the National Symphony Orchestra musicians in voluntarily accepting a 23-week season for 1939-1940 refutes any suggestion that local artists "put money above art," Dr. Hans Kindler declared last night.

Revelation that the players assured the symphony's life for another year by withdrawing an earlier request for a 25-week season was greeted with exuberance by the orchestra's conductor.

"It goes without saying that I am delighted," said the maestro, paying tribute to the generous spirit of the musicians and the "indefatigable efforts of the campaign workers."

Points to Photographer.

"I, in turn, will do my utmost to give our Washington public an even greater musical season than it has ever had," the conductor pledged.

Questioned on plans for the coming season, he pointed to a perspiring press photographer contending with flash bulbs, tripod and a grand piano in efforts to snap Dr. Kindler in half a dozen poses in the five minutes before the conductor was scheduled to deliver a radio address.

"My life is just the way he is now," the Dutch-born musician explained with a nod toward the cameraman, "except I'm like that all the time.

To Extend Policy

"There's been no chance yet to look over music for next year, but we begin next month, after the Walter concert," he continued. Bruno Walter, exiled German conductor, will lead the National Symphony April 12, at Dr. Kindler's personal invitation.

Dr. Kindler indicated that the policy of bringing in outside artists to appear with the National Symphony would be extended next year. "The great artists who appear with us are always warmly enthusiastic in praise of our efforts," he said. "They give us of Washington an ever-increasing reputation which we want to live up to."

"That's all I can tell you now," Dr. Kindler added, striding off toward a microphone, "but I know you're going to be pleased and surprised when we announce our full plans."

Youth Perches High on Bridge In Quest of Job

Cleveland, March 10 (U.P.).—Ray Stana, 19, went job-hunting in a strange place today.

He climbed the girders to the peak of the high level bridge, 300 feet above the Cuyahoga River, determined to stay on his perch "until somebody gives me a job."

Firemen finally hoisted an 85-foot ladder to Stana's level and persuaded him to descend. He was glad to, because "it's awful cold up there, and I'm getting hungry. Is anybody going to give me a job?"

Police took the youth to jail.

Jefferson Shrine Bids to Be Opened Despite Arts Plea

Despite a recent appeal of the Fine Arts Commission to Congress for alteration of designs for the Jefferson Memorial, the National Park Service will open bids March 17 for construction of the superstructure according to original plans, officials said yesterday.

The Fine Arts Commission asked reconsideration of the plans which call for a Pantheon type of building, holding that such a structure would block the view from the White House t othe Potomac River.

Answering the criticism that present specifications call for the use of a number of different types of marble and limestone, National Park Service officials said the purpose was to allow opportunity for general bidding.

N. Y. Indicts 24 As Ambulance Chasers

Alleged Ring Had '20 To 30 Cases Daily at Average Fee of $400'

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 10.—Indictment of 24 members of an alleged ambulance-chasing ring charged with unlawfully soliciting cases, was announced today by District Attorney Dewey.

The indictments charged 9 lawyers, 1 newspaper reporter and 14 others with conspiracy, a mis demeanor punishable by a maximum of three years' imprisonment.

Twelve of those indicted already were under arrest.

The "take" of the alleged ring, Dewey intimated, would run into thousands. The alleged conspirators handled from "20 to 30 cases a day at an average fee of $400," he charged.

All were identified by accident victims, the district attorney's office said, through photographs secretly obtained by police in the past six weeks.

Victim Unconscious at Time

In one case, Dewey said, a retainer for an attorney, was presented at a police station purporting to have been signed by an accident victim "who was unconscious at the time and had been since the accident.'

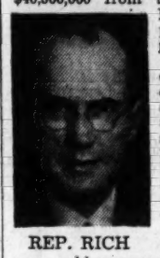
Meanwhile in Brooklyn, Sol Ullman, 48, who resigned as an assistant State attorney general ten days ago, was indicted with several unidentified persons in Special Prosecutor John Harlan Amen's investigation of an alleged abortion ring.

Ullman and the others were charged with conspiracy, bribery and asking illegal and unauthorized fees and gratuities from Dr. Morris Weiss.

The five-count indictment accused Ullman and the others of receiving $13,000 in cash from Dr. Weiss between 1932 and 1939, and also charged they demanded an additional $8,000 which they did not receive.

On Capitol Hill

Representative Rich (Republican), Pennsylvania, insisted yesterday that the House cut at least $40,300,000 from the $160,000,000 Interior Department appropriation bill.



REP. RICH

"Each and every year in each and every appropriations bill," he said in addressing his colleagues, "the amounts requested increase.

"What are you going to use, rubber money?" he asked, holding his hands above his head and stretching a piece of rubber about the size of a dollar bill. "That's the only way you can make income meet expenditures.

Declaring "this is a good place to start working toward what is vulgarly called a balanced budget," Representative Culkin (Republican), of New York, served notice he will move to strike a $23,000,000 appropriation for the Grand Coulee power and reclamation project from the Interior bill.

The Senate Appropriations Committee sliced $1,662,240 off the House Treasury-Postoffice bill, but increased the appropriations measure for the legislative branch $212,821 in reporting the two bills to the Senate.

As reported, the Treasury-Postoffice total was $1,696,929,114 and the legislative bill totalled $21,849,099. The Senate committee rejected House bill provisions which would have abolished the offices and salaries of the Surveyor of Customs at New York, and Comptrollers of Customs at New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, New Orleans, Chicago, San Francisco and Boston.

Senator McNary, of Oregon, the Republican leader, said yesterday that Congress should be able to adjourn by June 15 if President Roosevelt makes no proposals of an "experimental nature" and if farm legislation is handled expertly.

Taxing Wrong, Fratmen, Coed Tell Inquiry

Representatives Hear Students Decry Social Security 'Inequality'

A delegation of students from New England colleges and an attractive co-ed from the University of Maryland enlivened hearings of the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday with a plea that employes of Greek-letter fraternities be exempted from social security taxation.

The undergraduates brought a touch of color to the staid committee room as they protested against the "inequity" of the present law which exempts students who wait on table and do other work in college buildings but taxes students who perform similar tasks in college fraternities. They argued that both groups should be free from the levy.

The delegation, claiming support from the National Interfraternity Conference and the National Panhellenic Congress, included Miss Dorothy Huff, of the University of Maryland; a group from Amherst and others from Connecticut Wesleyan and Williams.

Representative Treadway, ranking minority member of the committee, indicated sympathy with the students—especially those from Amherst— as he pointed out he was graduated from Amherst "something over 50 years ago."

Social Security Income Tax

Earlier, Jacob Baker, representing the C. I. O. committee on social security, asserted that costs of social security taxes should be met from general income taxation rather than "from pay rolls and wages." He said the C. I. O. program also favored extension of social security to all sections of the population, "adequate minimum benefits" and representation of organized labor in the administration of the act.

Meanwhile, a poll of Democratic Representatives to test their feeling on the Townsend old age pension plan was scheduled for next week.

German People Don't Want War, Says Briton; Asserts Hitler Is Growing More Conciliatory

The German people will fight if compelled, but do not want war, Leslie Watson Fearn, British lecturer who has spent considerable time in Germany, declared yesterday.

FEARN

Fearn, who is touring this country, said the attitude of the German people was not appreciably different from that of other nationalities. They will follow Reichsfuehrer Hitler blindly, but their distaste for another war is common conversation in Germany.

Hitler, meanwhile, he declared, has adopted a broader outlook since Munich, so far as his concept of his role in international affairs goes. Fearn insisted that Prime Minister Chamberlain's talk with Hitler when he visited Germany set in motion a metamorphosis in Hitler's psychological state.

Chamberlain, he declared, induced Hitler to regard his mission in a different international light. He is not so bellicose as formerly, Fearn said. Moreover, he forfeited in the Czecho-Slovakian crisis the most advantageous time and place for war, if he had regarded this as inevitable.

Fearn said Hitler and other German leaders were not adverse to a conciliatory and co-operative approach to world problems. The chief need, however, he maintained, is that this country approach the German situation in the ight of understanding.

Since the armaments race threatens to cripple all participants economically, Fearn believes German leaders would listen to "reasonable" arms limitation proposals. He feels that Chamberlain, in flirting with the disarmament conference idea, is supported by the knowledge that the willingness of the Nazi government to co-operate is greater than is generally realized.

Fearn believes the German people would take kindly to the idea of international co-operation. A barrier to this, however, he said, is the reaction to the totalitarian idea and Nazi racial and religious persecutions. Mutual hatreds which have arisen must be put aside, he declared before anything can be achieved in the way of international co-operation.

Inquiry Asks 124 More Aides At Gallinger

Transfer of Mental Cases on Doctor's Say So Is Proposed

Ways to remedy "deplorable conditions" alleged to obtain at Gallinger Hospital and to end the controversy over who is to control the institution were specified yesterday by the House subcommittee which has been in charge of investigations there.

The subcommittee recommended:

Addition of "at least" 124 employes, including a medical officer with a salary of around $5,500, 40 graduate nurses, 40 nurses' helpers, and 30 orderlies.

Expenditure of "at least" $200,000 more each year to make this employment possible.

Amendment of the District lunacy law, to enable Gallinger to transfer mental patients to mental institutions immediately "when the physician in charge knows beyond question they are in need of mental treatment."

An inter-related working agreement between the District Health Department and the District's two medical schools.

Mutually Beneficial

"Participation of medical schools in the service at Gallinger has been mutually beneficial, and if anything more essential to the universities—in order that they may have proper ratings with the American Medical Association," Representative Bates (Democrat), of Kentucky, chairman, said.

Attached to his statement was a resume of testimony presented by Mrs. Marguerite P. Miller, wife of Representative Miller, of Connecticut, who has engaged in volunteer social service work at the hospital, and who declared neither Georgetown University nor George Washington University would be able to keep their A. M. A. rating without control of Gallinger beds. She said the A. M. A. specified a medical school must control at least 200 teaching beds, and that George Washington had but 15 and Georgetown but 115.

Dr. Cloyd Marvin, George Washington president, declared last night that Mrs. Miller "meant 15 endowed beds.' He said the school had access to more than 200 beds—counting those at Emergency Hospital and others in its own hospital.

"We Need Gallinger"

"We need Gallinger, of course, but not to get control of any greater number of beds. We need it for the variety of training we are thereby enabled to give in special fields," he declared.

Dr. Marvin said the schools welcomed a suggestion made early this week that the five resident physicians at Gallinger be given clinical professorships at the universities, in order that both visitng and resident doctors of the hospital be on an equal working basis.

"We offered Dr. Ruhland a place on our staff when he first came here. We want the closest relationship with the Health Department and Gallinger than we can get," he said.

Senate Move To Kill Loan Cripples ADA

Alley Clearance Plan Depends on $500,000 Committee Eliminated

The District slum clearance program will be seriously crippled unless $500,000 for the Alley Dwelling Authority eliminated from the Treasury-Postoffice supply bill yesterday by the Senate Appropriations Committee is restored, it was learned last night.

Although the agency has $6,000,000 borrowed from the United States Housing Authority, this cannot be used to purchase land for which no rehousing project will be developed, but must be applied to sections in which bad housing will be replaced by model structures, officials said.

Clearing alleys and congested areas, leaving them free for development of parking lots or other "non-crowded" projects, is a vital part of the ADA plan, John Ihlder, executive officer, said last night.

House Killed $500,000 First

"This means we cannot get to the worst and most congested parts," he said.

The $500,000 taken from the bill yesterday was but the remaining half of $1,000,000 approved for ADA by the Budget Bureau. The House Appropriations Committee halved the estimate first, expressing belief that the agency was well "taken care of."

The Budget Bureau, in approving the original $1,000,000 request, pointed out it would be a loan. Under plans developed by Ihlder and his committee, the parking lots—or whatever developments took the place of the slum alleys—would be commercial ventures and eventually pay for themselves.

Other Loans Cited

The original request asked loans of $1,000,000 from the Treasury annually for five years.

"It is the understanding of this committee," the Senate Committee said yesterday, "that the Alley Dwelling Authority has secured a loan of $6,000,000 from the United States Housing Authority and is negotiating a further loan of $8,400,000.

"It is the feeling of the committee that ample funds will be available to the authority to demonstrate what they can accomplish without an additional loan of $500,000, and the committee therefore recommends that the appropriation of $500,000 be disallowed."

Republicans Spend $70,623 In 2 Months

National Committee Reports $61,036 Was Collected

By the Associated Press.

The Republican National Committee yesterday reported to the clerk of the House it had collected $61,036 in the first two months of this year and spent $70,623.

For the same period, the Republican program committee reported contributions of $60,141 and expenditures of $58,517. Mrs. Chester C. Bolton, of South Euclid, Ohio, was listed as contributing $1,500 to the program unit.

Contributions of $15,982 from January 2 to March 8 were reported by the Republican finance committee of Pennsylvania, but $15,866 of that amount came from the national committee. Expenditures of the Pennsylvania unit were listed as $22,897. It reported a balance of $26,860 as of December 31, 1938.

Nelson A. Rockefeller, of New York; J. F. Lincoln, Cleveland, and C. B. Goodspeed, Chicago, who signed the report as national treasurer, were the largest contributors. Each gave $4,000.

Other big donations were given by A. E. Dick, Hazleton, Pa., $2,800; Frank Altschul, Greenwich, $2,500; H. Webb Smith, Hazleton, and Mrs. C. B. Goodspeed, Chicago, each $1,000; Thomas M. Lewis, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., and A. C. Mattei, San Francisco, $750 each; Gaston Du Bois, Clayton, Mo.; C. Mahlon Kline, Philadelphia; Mrs. A. F. Morrison, San Francisco; L. G. Flaccus, Pittsburgh; Thomas B. Moreland, Pittsburgh; E. W. Clark, Philadelphia, and C. F. Michaels, San Francisco, each gave $500.

Peril to Trade Seen in Change Of Gold Policy

Economist Opposes Extension of Huge Stabilization Fund

By the Associated Press.

Dr. Benjamin H. Beckhart, of Columbia University, warned the House Coinage Committee yesterday that business confidence and domestic and international trade might be "disrupted" if the Administration ceased buying gold or lowered its price.

Testifying in opposition to prolonging the life of the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund, Beckhart also urged repeal of the silver purchase act of 1934.

The committee is considering legislation to extend until January 15, 1941, the life of the stabilization fund and President Roosevelt's power to devalue the dollar, both due to expire July 1.

Banking Bill Introduced

Meanwhile, a banking and monetary bill purportedly indorsed by more than 100 of the Nation's leading economists, was introduced by Representative Voorhis (Democrat), California.

The bill follows closely a proposal introduced in 1934 by the late Senator Bronson Cutting, of New Mexico, and is based on study of monetary reforms by leading economists, Voorhis asserted. Only 10 of 165 economists polled on the program disapproved it, he said.

Voorhis' bill calls for the purchase by the government of the capital stock of the twelve Federal Reserve banks, abandonment of fractional reserve system, a return to the principle of regarding checking account deposits as trust funds, and control of the volume of money and demand bank deposits by the Federal Reserve Board and the Secretary of the Treasury. The bill would require checking account deposits to be fully covered by a cash reserve or instantly convertible Government bonds.

No Need for Revaluation

Beckhart told the coinage committee there was no necessity for continuing the President's power to revalue the dollar. He added:

"To continue this power implies that there are good reasons for further devaluation, or that we are still involved in some sort of an emergency or that we are ready to engage in currency warfare."

Beckhart said, however, that he thought it would be a good thing if the United States could secure agreement of Great Britain and France to a simultaneous reduction in the price of gold. But he added that he thought there was little likelihood of that.

Much o fthis nation's monetary difficulty would vanish, Beckhart said, if more corporations and individuals invested in government securities. The proportion of private investors buying government bonds as compared with banks is far less, he stated, than in France or England.

"It is a dangerous policy," he asserted, "to pile government bonds into banks instead of private hands."

Montgomery Welfare Needs Are $48,862

Board's Estimate Is $1,939 Decrease From This Quarter

Montgomery County Bureau of the Post, 9313 Clark Ave., Silver Spring, Md. Telephone SHepherd 4200.

Rockville.—Improved employment conditions in Montgomery County are indicated in a report of the Montgomery County Welfare Board made public yesterday by Mrs. Dorothy M. Kurtz, executive secretary, which reveals that anticipated expenses for the next quarterly period will be almost $2,000 less than budget for the current quarter ending the last of this month. In addition, Mrs. Kurtz announced the board has fewer applications for assistance now pending than at any period since the administration of categorical assistance began in 1936.

The welfare board's tentative budget for the next quarter calls for a fund of $48,862 which is a decrease of $1,939.50 over the present quarterly budget. This decrease may be even greater, Mrs. Kurtz said, due to continuous efforts of the staff in reviewing the case load and adjusting grants to fit current needs. This is expected to result in a surplus at the end of this quarter which will be deducted from the appropriation for the next three months.

Improved living conditions are illustrated in the record of pending applications for assistance. At the present time, Mrs. Kurtz reports, the Welfare Board has only 28 old age assistance applications pending, compared with a record of 91 pending applications at this same time last year. A similar downward trend is shown in the case of dependent children. The board now has only 15 pending applications for aid to dependent children, whereas 58 applications for this type of aid were pending one year ago. In addition, the number of applications for assistance of all types decreased sharply in February over January of this year.

Discuss Legislation

The Welfare Board devoted considerable time this week to consideration of pending welfare legislation in Congress and in the Maryland General Assembly. Interest was shown in the Byrnes bill, pending in Congress, to provide for aid to handicapped persons through a new social security category to cover unemployable individuals not eligible for assistance from present categories.

The board voted to urge enactment of a bill in the Maryland House of Delegates for State and county financing on a 50-50 basis of a program to aid persons who require assistance because of illness or incapacitation, unemployability, death or absence from home of parents in the case of children, and unemployment in types of cases where the wage-earner cannot be assigned to a work project.

At the same time, the board urged defeat of a proposed bill to relieve children not now furnishing support for their parents of all responsibility for providing for the parents. The board held passage of such a law would penalize children who have voluntarily assumed responsibility for support of their parents and encourage other children to decline such support.

Expenditures by the board last month were listed at $15,895.82, of which $8,413.35 was for old-age assistance, $5,204.14 was for aid to dependent children and $430.50 was for aid to needy blind persons.

Citizens Deny Favoring Sales Tax Base Cut

Most of Changes Suggested by Morgan Approved

Repudiation of the proposal to lower from 25 cents to 13 cents the exemption rate of the sales tax recommended in the Pond tax plan was announced last night by the Citizens Advisory Committee on Taxation after a closed meeting that lasted from 4 until nearly 9 p. m. without a break.

Also disapproved was a suggestion for a retroactive income tax.

The meeting was a special one called after a complaint that so-called "administrative" changes in the tax plan, which were outlined to a House subcommittee by Jo V. Morgan, the one-man Board of Tax Appeals, never had been approved by the committee. The advisory committee approved "most of these changes," said an announcement, but they were not listed.

Origin of Plan a Mystery

Robert V. Fleming, president of Riggs National Bank, issued the announcement and said all members of the committee had declined to add nothing to it. This left the origin of the plan for a lower sales tax exemption a mystery. Fleming said it was not proposed by the Board of Trade or any of its official committees, but came from an individual member whom he declined to name.

The tax plan was drafted to meet the District's need of revenue, and was based on a report by Dr. Chester Pond, a New York tax expert. The plan eliminated the business privilege and intangible personal property taxes.

The new tax structure proposed included a 5 per cent income tax on corporations, a tax on personal incomes over $14,000, revision of the gross receipts tax on utilities and a 2 per cent sales tax with sales under 25 cents to be exempt.

Morgan Made Suggestions

Hearings before a subcommittee of the House District Committee, headed by Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, developed that suggestions for changes were made in a draft of the bill which was given to the committee. Morgan said he had made these suggestions after conferences with persons interested.

The special meeting was called to consider these changes. Among those at the meeting were:

Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, the chairman, District auditor; Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal, Morgan, Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman of the Public Utilities Commission; Fred D. Allen, tax assessor; Fleming, L. A. Carruthers, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations; John Locher, president of the Central Labor Union; Mrs. Ernest Felld Parkinson, of the League of Women Voters, and Charles M. Thomas, of the Federation of Civic Associations.

Nonmembers attending were L. H. Parker and William Press, Board of Trade officials.

Committee Statement.

The statement issued by Fleming said:

"The Citizens' Advisory Committee has been reconvened at the call of the chairman, and the committee has been going over various phases of the proposed tax program.

"There seems to be some misinterpretation as to just what has occurred. It is inherent in the drafting of any piece of legislation . . . that paragraphs pertaining to certain provisions . . . will not entain language that clearly carries out the intent as determined upon in the vote of the committee, and further hat as the examination of the draft of the bill has proceeded it has been found that there were cases wher it was ncessary to make corrections, changes or refinements to carry out the intent of the Tax Advisory Committee. Therefore District officials charged with presenting these matters to committees of Congress, being asked to give the House District Committee a print of the tax proposals solely for purposes of consideration of that committee, incorporated certain of the changes that had been suggested in a print

"The purpose of the meeting this afternoon was to present to the entire Tax Advisory Committee matters concerned with suggested changes incorporated in the print. The committee was in entire accord on most of the changes, and additional ones were recommended and approved. The committee was not in accord with the suggestion for a retroactive feature as to the income tax or with reducing the exempt articles under the sales tax below 25 cents.

"As to matters pertaining to the inheritance and gift tax amendments had never been a matter that had been brought before the Tax Advisory Committee for consideration it was the concensus of opinion that this should be left to the District officials to handle in a separate legislative proposal.

"The non-official members of the Tax Advisory Committee have been working with the District officials who are members of the committee and those present expressed their appreciation of the fine co-operation which they are receiving from those officials of the District government."

Jimmy's Place To Be Closed After Tonight

Gambling Legislation Pending in Maryland Reported as Cause

"Jimmy's place," notorious gambling resort 25 feet across the District line at Bladensburg road and Eastern avenue, will be closed for an indefinite period after tonight's "take" is counted, The Post learned last night.

Jimmy LaFontaine, who has catered to the Capital's gambling instincts for 20 years at the same stand, is described by several persons close to his operations as determined to shut down the famous gaming house before stringent anti-gambling legislation now pending in the Maryland General Assembly becomes law.

"Jimmy has closed down before and always opened up again," one Prince Georges County resident pointed out, however, "and it may be this time that he's just waiting until things quiet down."

Previous suspensions of business at Jimmy's, it was recalled, usually have been synchronized with the semi-annual sessions of the circuit court, when the Prince Georges County grand jury, with its full powers of investigation, comes into being for a month or six weeks.

The next court term does not begin until April 3, though, and Jimmy's friends say the shrewd, stocky gambler, now 65 and a millionaire, sees the death warrant for his walled casino in the bills now under discussion at Annapolis.

One measure would provide for issuance of search warrants enabling police to raid any suspected gambling establishment. The second describes possession of any gambling paraphernalia as prima facie evidence of guilt.

Meanwhile, States Attorney E. Winship Wheatley, jr., of Prince Georges County, yesterday gave police 24 hours to put every slot machine in the county out of business. The Maryland Court of Appeals last year ruled slot machines illegal, on grounds they involve no element of skill, after charges that operators have taken out licenses permitting use of pin-ball devices and then installed slot machines.

Apparent determination of Prince Georges County law officers to enforce whatever anti-gambling legislation goes on the books is regarded as a potent factor in Jimmy's reported decision to close his house.

The bills which are said to worry Jimmy were reported favorably by the judiciary committee of the House of Delegates and have passed their first reading in the lower chamber.

The gaming house on Bladensburg road has been described as the largest between Saratoga Springs and Miami. A fleet of limousines is available to transport patrons between the casino and points in Washington, while armed escorts are offered to citizens starting home with heavy winnings.

Behind the high board fence, plastered with advertisements, which surrounds the establishment, are parking places for close to 1,000 automobiles. They have all been occupied on more than one occasion.

Vatican Says Mass for Pius XI, Prepares to Crown Successor

At Request of Cardinal Dougherty, Pope Blesses Move to Beatify Mother Seton, American Founder of Sisters of Charity

By the Associated Press.

Vatican City, March 10.—Masses were said today for the late Pope Pius XI while the Vatican made final preparations for the coronation next Sunday of his successor, Pius XII.

Hundreds of the faithful prayed near the tomb of Pius XI in the grottoes of St. Peter's in commemoration of his death a month ago today.

Masses were celebrated there by several of those who were closest to him, including his two private secretaries, Mgrs. Carlo Confalonieri and Diego Venini; his sacred chamberlain, Mgr. Calleri de Vignale, and Mgr. Beniamino Bardone, secretary of the ceremonial congregation.

Pius XI lattended a Lenten sermon delivered in the throne room by the apostolic preacher, Father Vigilio da Valstagna.

Pope Pius XII also blessed the cause for beautification of Mother Seton, founder of the Sisters of Charity of the United States, in private audience granted to Dennis Cardinal Dougherty, of Philadelphia, today.

The new Pontiff's benediction on the proceedings, which if successful may make oMther Seton the first native American Saint, was requested by the cardinal who has been actively promoting her cause.

After talking alone with the Pope for 45 minutes, the cardinal presented aFther Salvatore Burgo, of Philadelphia, vice postulator of the cause, and Antonio Filicchi, member of the Italian family with whom Mother Seton lived when she embraced the Catholic faith.

Mother Seton founded a number of Catholic institutions including the first parochial schools.

Strike

normal service, the hotels have performed a miracle."

Taking issue with Roberts categorically, Whitney said that about half the chefs had walked out, and that virtually all of the head waiters and captains had joined the picket line.

"We feel pretty confident, after being with Dr. Steelman, that this controversy is going our way," Whitney said.

There were others, however, who foresaw a long-drawn-out battle between the hotels and the strikers.

The unions involved in the strike, and which are contending for a "closed shop," are all affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. Yesterday, however, John Brophy, national director of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, joined the picket line at the Mayflower Hotel and issued a statement saying that the C. I. O. was glad to support workers in all such "legitimate" strikes.

C. I. O. Pickets Offered

The Washington Industrial Council pledged its support yesterday and the C. I. O. Cafeteria Union's executive committee offered to add its own pickets to the A. F. L. lines, according to Jack Mink, business manager of the union.

The executive board of the Washington League of Women Shoppers, which went on record Thursday backing the strikers, yesterday mailed the findings of its own investigation to the 500 members of the league. The statement concluded:

"In reviewing the facts the executive board feels that while the hotels are quite willing to capitalize on the service that the union performs by acting as an employment center, they are unwilling to guarantee any protection to the union which would enable it to protect its workers through agreements as to fair wages and working conditions."

Miss Hepburn Moves

Katherine Hepburn, appearing at the National Theater, moved from the Carlton to the home of a friend last night because, she said, she did not want to cross the picket line. She is a member of Actors Equity and the Screen Actors Guild. She said she would have left earlier, but believed the strike affected only the hotel restaurant and was not eating at the Carlton. The majority of her supporting cast is living at the Hay-Adams, not involved in the strike.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, last night canceled his appearance at a session of the Model Senate at the Continental. "I was distinctly unwilling to cross the picket line," he said. Thomas is chairman of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor.

Representative Patrick (Democrat), of Alabama, substituted for the Senator. Asked whether he had passed through the strikers, Patrick said: "I did not pass through the picket. I do not know whether the pickets were withdrawn as a courtesy when I entered or not." Strike leaders said they were unaware the Congressman had entered the hotel.

Union members yesterday began telephoning members of Congress, urging them to move out of the struck hotels. Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, author of the national labor relations act, apparently had left the Shoreham. A large number of Senators and Representatives, however, were remaining in this and other hotels.

Manager Gets Pamphlet

Harry Somerville, manager of the Willard, was handed a pamphlet urging support for the strike as he walked out of the hotel. He chatted with the young lady who was distributing the pamphlets for a few moments. He questioned her about its contents, and she said "read it through." Then as the picket line moved by, one of the striking employes called out to the pamphleteer "that's the boss."

Yesterday's negotiations at the Labor Department began at 10 a. m. Dr. Steelman had with him two assistants—Howard T. Colvin and John L. Connor. Representing the hotels were Joseph McGarraghy, their counsel; Thomas Carson, president of the Washington Properties, which includes the Wardman and Carlton, and Gardner Moore, managing director of the Shoreham.

The union representatives were Samuel Levine, lawyer; Charles E. Sands, chairman of the strike committee; Garland P. Webb, business agent of Hotel and Restaurant Employes' Alliance, Local 781; Morris Verbov, representing cooks and kitchen help; Margaret McMillin, representing waitresses; James McNamara, representing the service workers, and F. E. Whitney, secretary-treasurer of the joint executive board of the striking unions.

effect of the amended rule would be to restrict short sales."

"For example," it said, "if transactions in a security have been effected at 50 and 49⅞, a short sale could be effected not at 49⅞, but only at 50 or above."

The commission also amended the short-selling rule by adding an exemption for certain short sales made in the course of international "arbitrage".

As officials predicted the new accords with Brazil will help to extricate that country from the involvements of barter trade with Germany, Mr. Roosevelt said an Administration objective is the substitution of normal for barter trade everywhere.

Uruguay, already a United States partner in a reciprocal trade agreement, may be the next South American republic to receive American loans and credits to maintain the "two way" flow of commerce which reciprocity trade envisions, officials said.

Argentine Deal Forecast

They indicated the Uruguayan deal will be small, however, by comparison with the Brazilian compact, in which the United States pledged a potential $120,000,000 aid in gold and credits in return for Brazil's restoration of free exchange and resumption of service on its dollar debt.

Another result, they hoped, might be conclusion of a long-sought reciprocal agreement with Argentina, South America's principal exporting nation.

The sealing of closer commercial ties with Brazil, officials thought, may induce Argentina to abandon its demand for institution of the Argentine-American sanitary meat pact as a condition for considering a reciprocal treaty. The State Department professed confidence a reciprocal pact would stimulate Argentine-American trade.

Brazilian Deal Praised

New York, March 10 (AP).—Howard Welch, manager of Bendix Aviation Export Corporation, asserted today that the United States trade pact with Brazil is "by far the most significant event bearing on our relations with South America that has taken place in many years."

"The action of the Washington authorities in this case," said Welch, "is timely and very significant. It comes at a time when it is increasingly apparent that the war clouds over the world stem from causes more economic than political . . .

"The American countries south of the Equator need airplanes, automobiles, machinery and equipment, and orders in all these categories may be expected in due course."

Wall street brokers, who have been experiencing hard times on quiet markets in recent weeks, greeted announcement of the modification in Federal short-selling rules as a welcome easing of supposed brakes on stock exchange trading.

Exchange members reached for comment felt the move raised hope for further changes in SEC laws and rules to improve market mechanics along lines desired in stock exchange circles. A Nation-wide meeting of security exchanges is scheduled to be held in Washington next Monday and Tuesday to draft recommendations to the SEC for changes aimed to make Federal control "more workable."

House Inquiry On WPA Hinted By Woodrum

Relief

under WPA auspices with especial attention to theater and art projects.

In fact, at least one member of the subcommittee thought it possible that the whole question of governmental relief policy, including various proposals to consolidate all Federal public works programs or to "restore relief to the States" might be considered. Such a development, causing delay at this time, probably would be unwelcome to Col. Harrington, who told the subcommittee yesterday he would like to know at a fairly early date how large a fund he can count upon for the balance of the fiscal year.

Although President Roosevelt has not mentioned the size of the supplemental appropriation he will request next week, Majority Leader Rayburn, as well as Woodrum, said yesterday he expected the sum would be $150,000,000. Col. Harrington declared Thursday that unless that amount is voted by Congress, relief rolls would have to be reduced by June 30 to 2,000,000, or two-thirds their present size.

400,000 to Go April 1

Without supplementary funds, Harrington said, 400,000 WPA workers would be dropped April 1 and another 500,000 in the ensuing three months.

Chairman Taylor, of the Appropriations Committee, told The Post last night that, if the figures Col. Harrington presents next week warrant it, the emergency fund might be recommended by the committee without delay and then the larger question of relief policy examined at leisure.

Taylor said he told the President there was a strong economy move in Congress, evidenced by the fact that every appropriation bill thus far reported has been cut below budget estimates. A simliar fate awaits all th eremaining regular appropriation bills, he added.

Political Activity Hit

Another representative at the conference reported the President was informed that political activity of the WPA had injured the Democratic party in last year's elections and, if continued, would impair the party's chances in 1940.

Angry criticism of the Administration's relief policy came from Representative Taber, of New York, ranking minority member of the Appropriations Committee, who charged that "the WPA rolls have been deliberately built up to a higher point than they were on January 1, just for the purpose of getting this extra $150,000,000." Asserting he "wouldn't give the President a nickel," Taber said he would oppose any additional request for emergency funds.

More restrained comment came from Representative Martin, of Massachusetts, minority leader, who said the President would have to justify his demand for more money.

5 Per Cent Undeserving

At his press conference, the President said his forthcoming message on relief would give statistics showing what has been done thus far in eliminating persons from the rolls. He mentioned the dropping of 30,000 aliens as an example.

Suicide Balked, Widow, 81, Gets Job as Mother

'A Good One,' She Says in Court as Listener 'Adopts' Her

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 10.—A white-haired, 81-year-old widow, who would have ended her life in the river yesterday, began it anew today in the home of a stranger to whom she promised to be "a good mother."

Friendless and penniless, Mrs. Anna Schmidt was restrained from leaping into the river yesterday by a policeman. Today she appeared in Women's Court on a disorderly conduct charge.

In broken English, she related that she came to Chicago from Austria-Hungary with her husband 30 years ago. He obtained a job in the Pullman Car Works and things looked bright in their adopted country. They contracted to buy a home for $6,500.

Fifteen years ago her husband died. Mrs. Schmidt was unable to keep up payments on the mortgage. Last month foreclosure action was taken, $4,000 still owing.

Her only surviving child is a daughter, married and living in Hungary.

In court today sympathetic listeners looked up in surprise when a middle-aged woman arose and asked to speak.

She identified herself as Mrs. Helen Whitehurst and said she had read about Mrs. Schmidt in the newspapers and wanted to offer her a home.

"We have no children, and she can take the place of my own mother who is 74, lives in Austria and whom I probably never will see again," Mrs. Whitehurst told the court.

"Gott zu danken (God bless you)," exclaimed Mrs. Schmidt. She began weeping.

In German, Mrs. Whitehurst said, "little mother, don't cry."

Mrs. Schmidt replied in tears:

Suspect Admits $50,000 Burglary

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 10.—Wayne Ward, 28, was seized today by Postoffice inspectors who said he confessed the $50,000 burglary of the Yale, Va., postoffice last March 15.

Three inspectors and a city policeman broke into Ward's lodging house room today. They said Ward attempted to reach a pistol in a dresser drawer, but was subdued. He had only $2 in his possession.

Robert Lewis, assistant chief postal inspector, said Ward was sought since anonymous information received shortly after the burglary named him as the man who blew up the safe and escaped with cash, stamps and negotiable bonds.

Judge Berates Child-Beater, Gives Him Year

Regrets Man Can't 'Suffer and Blister' For Longer Term

Denounced by the court for committing one of the "cruelest things a man can do," John Poff, 35, a laborer and the father of five children, was sent to jail for one year yesterday for beating and choking his two daughters.

Judge Edward M. Curran told Poff he "was not fit to be called a man," and that to strike a defenseles child is "a crime against decency and humanity:"

Poff was arrested by Fourth Precinct police after blacking the eye of Margaret Poff, 5, and choking Betty Lou, 7, last Tuesday. Both girls testified against their father.

"He struck me," blue-eyed, golden-haired Margaret cried out from the witness stand. One of her eyes was badly discolored.

Judge Curran rebuked Poff for almost 20 minutes before passing sentence.

"I wish I could give you two years in jail at hard labor," the judge declared. "You ought to be sent down to sweat and suffer and blister."

The court was told that Poff's wife, Mrs. Norah Poff, was ill in bed Tuesday when her husband struck the children. She had given birth to another child only five weeks ago. Mrs. Poff testified that her husband spent most of his money on whisky.

Judge Curran referred the family to Probation Officer Joseph Sanford.

Democracies Inciting War, Stalin Asserts

Seek Soviet-Nazi Clash Over Ukraine, He Tells Party Heads

By the United Press.

Moscow, Saturday, March 11.—Josef V. Stalin last night opened the eighteenth All-Union Congress of the Communist Party with an accusation that Great Britain and France, with support of the American press, had attempted to bring about a war between the Soviet Union and Germany.

Stalin told the 2,000 party delegates gathered in the vast Saint Andrew's hall of the Kremlin, once the throne room of the Czars, that Britain and France had retreated before the dictator-aggressor nations during the last year in order to precipitate war between other powers "with the British and French aiming at coming out on top."

He said the British, French and North American press sought to foster a Soviet-German conflict over the issue of an independent Ukrainia and poison the atmosphere "without any obvious reasons."

Refers to Ukraine

Stalin referred to agitation in recent months, supposedly with Nazi backing, for creation of a vast independent Ukrainia of 400,000,000 people by carving slices from Soviet Russia, Poland, Rumania and Czecho-Slovakia.

As secretary general of the Communist Party, Stalin outlined four principles which he said would guide Soviet foreign policy through Europe's increasing tension. They were:

A continued policy of peace and the strengthening of economic relations with all countries.

Observe caution and prevent provocateurs of war, who want other people to "pull their chestnuts out of the fire," from involving the Soviet Union in any international conflict.

Strengthen by all means the military power of the Red army and the strength of the Red fleet.

Stalin Given Ovation

It was the first Communist Congress held since 1934 and the deputies gave Stalin an enormous ovation.

Stalin spoke slowly in his long outline of Soviet foreign policy and drank liberally from a pitcher of mineral water. He invited cordial relations from other countries, but warned them "not to try to violate the interests of our country."

Md. Traffic Deaths Drop Below Rate for 1938

Although five more traffic deaths were recorded in Maryland last month than in February, 1938, the total for the first two months was five below the same period last year, the commissioner of motor vehicles announced yesterday. The February total was 31, compared with 26 in February, 1938, while the two-month total was 57, against 62 last year.

Of those killed, 74 per cent were pedestrians and most accidents occurred between intersections on dry concrete roads after dark.

Hitler Calls Emergency Parley Of Aides in Slovak Crisis

Czech

was reported killed and three seriously wounded when Czech troops clashed with the Hlinka guards, followers of the late Father Andreas Hlinka, Slovakian secessionist leader.

The clashes began as Karl Sidor, vice premier of Slovakia, was arrested in conversations with the Czech government looking to a peaceful settlement of the uprising. His conversations had been described as "satisfactory" although no statement was forthcoming from the Czech authorities.

Sidor was later released, and in a radio broadcast late tonight from Bratislava predicted the crisis over the Slovak uprising would be settled within 24 hours.

As the street clashes raged, it was reported 5,000 Germans in a mass meeting at Pressburg decided to support the Slovakians in their fight for independence.

(Semi-official reports circulated in Berlin and Budapest tonight said the Bratislava Slovaks had appealed to Chancellor Hitler to intervene with the Prague government in their behalf.)

Government Dissolved

Dr. Emil Hacha, president of Czecho-Slovakia, moved swiftly today to quell the nationalist plot to separate Slovakia from Czecho-Slovakia. He dissolved the Slovak government, dismissing Premier Joseph Tiso and other cabinet members. Then he appointed Deputy Sivak as premier of a new Slovak government, with Vice Premier Sidor remaining in that post.

Sanio Mach, Tiso's press chief, and Dr. Vojtech Tuka, a professor at Bratislava University, understood to have been the leaders of the plot, were reported to have been arrested. Many followers were thrown into concentration camps.

Plans for the rebellion were discovered in Bratislava and other cities by military authorities. The Prague government suppressed it today by moving a mechanized division of troops into Slovakia and occupying public buildings.

Appeals to Reich

Despite the wholesale dismissals from the government there were other signs tonight than the outbreak of new street fighting that a peaceful settlement was not in sight.

Tiso, according to reports in Berlin, sent a note to the German government appealing for assistance. And tonight in a radio broadcast from Vienna, Ferdinand Durcansky, labor minister in Tiso's cabinet and dismissed with him, declared the new members of the Slovak government named by Hacha were "traitors."

Durcansky was understood to be in Vienna on a mission for Tiso and it was said he would go to Berlin to seek an interview with Hitler on behalf of the ousted Slovakian premier.

All former Slovakian ministers concerned in the nationalist movement were reported to have been taken into "protective custody" on the grounds they had broken their "holy oath to protect the integrity of the country."

Hoare Avows Sanctity of U. S. Isolation

Britain Unwilling To Entangle This Country, He Says

By Frank R. Kelley

Special Cable to The Post.

London, March 10.—The British government has no intention of being "meddlesome and foolish" by attempting to drawn the United States into European entanglements against its will, Sir Samuel Hoare, home secretary and trusted member of Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's inner cabinet, declared tonight.

His declaration came in a speech in which he urged a five-year peace plan of no war or rumors of war, so "the almost incerible inventions and discoveries of our time" might be devoted to "the creation of a golden age."

Hoare suggested that five men in Europe—three dictators (Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin), and two prime ministers (Chamberlain and Daladier), might join by giving forces to "'transform the whole history of the world" by reducing poverty to insignificance and raising the standard of living to unprecedented heights.

"Blessed in their efforts by the President of the United States," Hoare said, "'they might make themselves the eternal benefactors of the human race."

Speaking at a Conservative Party meeting in Chelsea, which he represents, Hoare said Britain recognized the United States had its own problems to solve and did not want them compromised by foreign obligations.

"We realize these difficulties, we accept them, and we should be both meddlesome and foolish if we attempted to run counter to them," Hoare continued. "The American democracy will go its own way and no one here will try to deflect it." Hoare, who some day may be prime minister, went out of his way to praise the Roosevelt Administration's rearmament plans in common with those of Britain and France as symbolic of a great revival of democratic strength which bespoke a "solidarity of effort" and a "fundamental unity" between the three nations.

Apparently assuming the role of spokesman for Washington and Paris, in addition to London, Hoare insisted the arms of the democracies were only for defense.

"We have no intention of attacking anyone," he declared, "and we are not marching to war, but to peace, if only others will leave us alone."

"Germany and Italy," he went on, "have constantly repudiated any intention to attack the democracies and so far as the democracies are themselves concerned, their policy is a policy of peace and tolerance, and the settlement of all international disputes by negotiation and common sense. Why then, they ask, should anyone attack them? What question is there that should lead to war? There is no question that cannot be settled by friendly discussion. How then and where can a war begin?"

British Warships Recapture Ship Seized by Franco's Navy

Spanish

ternational News Service reported tonight.

[The surrender would involve the simultaneous capitulation of the largest centers not yet in Franco's hands, including Madrid, Valencia and Cartagena.—Editor's note.]

The Communists, who started their revolt Tuesday, had taken positions in upper Alcala street at the edge of Manuel Becerra, strategic east side square.

As soon as the troops from Valencia arrived they swung into action. A fierce battle raged around the square for several hours before the government announced it had gained the upper hand.

[However, the International News Service reported a majority of the Madrid military garrison has joined the Communist-led revolt, according to reports reaching the Barcelona headquarters of Gen. Franco.

[Miaja is outnumbered in desperate fighting and the Communist-led rebels are in control of the capital's communications, these advices said.—Editor's Note]

The Communists were led by Lieut. Col. Jose Barcelo, former commander of the First army corps, and Lieut. Col. Francisco Bueno, who formerly commanded the Second army corps.

They were said by the government to have promised their support last Sunday after the overthrow of the regime of Premier Negrin, and then to have led the revolt two days later.

One of the strongholds desperately holding out was Montana Barracks, near the northern railway station.

The Communists began surrendering in great numbers yesterday after the capitulation of their headquarters, a farmhouse 2½ miles northeast of Madrid.

The cabinet issued a statement admitting the uprising placed the Republican army "in a temporary state of weakness at a time when Franco is preparing to attack Madrid."

Church of the Week

Petworth Methodists to Lay Cornerstone of Building

Educational Unit, to Have Assembly Room Seating 200 and Epworth League Chapel Will Be Dedicated in Four Weeks

Marking realization of a long-cherished dream, the congregation of Petworth Methodist Episcopal Church will lay the cornerstone of its new $50,000 educational building next Sunday, and dedicate it four weeks later.

Rising behind the church at New Hampshire avenue and Grant Circle, the new structure is made possible, to a large extent, through the co-operation of classes, youth societies and other organizations which, according to the Rev. Frank Steelman, pastor, raised more than $2,000 in 1938.

DR. STEELMAN (pastor)

The educational building will be the "last word" in Sunday school facilities, containing, for one thing, a chapel for Epworth League devotional gatherings.

Led by June Mehlfelt, this progressive group is now engaged in a series of discussions on "The Other Man's Religion," bringing leaders of other faiths to address their sessions, among them Rabbi Solomon Metz, of Adas Israel Congregation. The senior young people's organization is supervised by Gene Otto, one of Petworth's outstanding younger leaders.

Especially looking forward to the new quarters, which will have an assembly room seating 200, will be the following Sunday-school groups and leaders, of which Thomas Mears is general superintendent; Nursery, Mrs. J. W. Brown; beginners, Mrs. Edna Suter; primary, Miss Mary Etta Callahan; juniors, Miss Meta Phillips, and intermediates, R. B. Rudy.

MEARS (school head)

The Woman's Guild, of which Mrs. Harry A. Beck is president, contributes $500 annually toward the new educational building. The Home Missionary Society, Mrs. E. C. Gearhart, president; the foreign missionary unit, under Mrs. David J. Price; the junior and senior choirs, led by Mrs. Ardis Cannon, also organist, and the girls' choir, conducted by Miss Beth King, also give their share.

L. T. JONES (trustee)

GENE OTTO (youth leader)

The new quarters will allow expansion of adult Sunday-school work, which now centers around the Everyman's Bible Class, with John B. Williams and J. W. Fewell as teacher and president, respectively; the Philathea (women's) Class, Mrs. Thomas B. Keely, teacher; the Berean Class, under Mrs. J. T. Shadle; the Harrison Class, oldest in point of service, and the Bykota and Mrs. Gates' Classes, the latter two now being forced to meet in the pasonage, due to crowded conditions

The new project also will cover renovation of the Fellowship Hall, including building of a new stage, enlargement of the church kitchen and installation of a new oil furnace.

Petworth Methodist Church, to which Dr. Steelman came last June, after two years at Calvary Methodist Church, held its first services in 1905 at 836 Varnum street northwest, organized by George C. Hough. The latter constructed the congregation's first church a year later at Eighth and Shepherd streets northwest. On October 8, 1916, the present church building's cornerstone was laid.

At the 11 a. m. service tomorrow Dr. Steelman will preach on "The Christian's Cross."

Plan to Sell Loan Cotton Hit in House

Committee Opposes Smith Bill Calling For Cut in Acreage

By the Associated Press.

House Agriculture Committeemen yesterday expressed opposition to a pending Senate proposal to cut cotton production still further and put some Government loan cotton on the market.

At the same time, the American Farm Bureau Federation threw its influence against the cotton program which was advanced by Senator Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina, and received the Senate Agriculture Committee's approval Thursday.

Export Subsidy Favored

Edward A. O'Neal, federation president, said after a White House conference that he told Mr. Roosevelt the federation favored, instead, a cotton export subsidy similar to that which has aided in disposition abroad of about 90,000,000 bushels of wheat.

Senator Smith's measure would authorize the Government to sell loan cotton for 3 cents a pound to growers who would reduce their allocated production under the present farm program by an amount equal to their purchases. It also would authorize price adjustment payments of up to 5 cents a pound to farmers who marketed their staple instead of storing it under a Government loan. The Government now has about 11,000,000 bales of cotton on which it has lent about $500,000,000.

Smith said this scheme would work much better than an export-subsidy program because there would be "none of this two-price stuff to fool with.

"Let's subsidize the home folks rather than the foreign fellows if we are doing any subsidizing," he said.

Jones Opposes Plan

Chairman Jones (Democrat), Texas, of the House Agriculture Committee, indicated little favor for Smith's plan.

"I don't see right now that we need any new legislation to meet the problem because under the existing law, the Secretary (of Agriculture) can do enough to correct the situation," Jones said.

He referred to use of tariff funds earmarked for disposition of farm products, Commodity Credit Corporation loans and machinery for parity payments.

Porter Reinstated After Numbers Quiz

United States Marshal John B. Colpoys yesterday restored August Foreman, 48, colored, to duty as a porter and elevator operator at the courthouse.

Foreman, a veteran employe, was suspended after John B. Upperman, who later was pailed a year for criminal contempt of court, testified he had placed numbers bets with a man named "August." No evidence was developed, it was said, to connect Foreman with the numbers racket.

Attempt to Mislead Senators Charged in FHA Hearing

U. S. Building and Loan League Representative Denies Any Impropriety In Wires Against Agency Extension

By the Associated Press.

Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, complained yesterday that "misleading" telegrams had been sent to Senators as a result of a dispute between two Government agencies dealing with home financing.

The Alabama Senator made the charge at a hearing of a Senate Banking and Currency Committee on legislation to extend and expand powers of the Federal Housing Administration.

Morton Bodfish, representative for the United States Building and Loan League, quickly denied any impropriety in the telegrams which opposed the FHA extensions.

Bodfish appeared for savings and loan associations which are associated with the Federal Home Loan Bank System, Federal agency which has opposed doubling the present FHA insurance limit of $3,000,000,000, and has asked that FHA insurance be limited to new construction, rather than refinancing existing mortgages.

Bankhead charged that George S. McKinnis, Shawnee, Okla., building and loan official who also serves on an advisory council for FHA, had asked members of this latter group to protest by telegrams to Senators.

Bodfish said local building and loan associations had been "injured" when, he said, FHA representatives came into cities and tried to get home owners to switch their mortgages to FHA.

The witness said he thought it was proper for these local community savings groups to protest.

Before this exchange, Chairman John H. Fahey, of the Home Loan Bank Board, told Sentaors it might be unwise to try to force home mortgage interests rates down too low.

When committee members raised a question about the FHA interest maximum of 5 per cent compared with higher building and loan rates, Fahey said that interest rate was not the only consideration for the borrower.

He explained that service fees, appraisals, brokerage fees and other factors were also involved in "actual or true interest rates."

Thomas S. Holden, authority on construction data and vice president of the F. W. Dodge Corporation, said the FHA had brought private capital into industry by insuring mortgages on homes. He said the Business Advisory Council of the Commerce Department had approved a pending bill increasing the limit on FHA-insured mortgages.

George C. Johnson, representing the Dime Savings Bank of Brooklyn, accused Bodfish's organization of "trying to get a monopoly on refinancing of home mortgages."

Johnson, who said he spoke for savings banks, said FHA insurance permitted these institutions to invest in home mortgages.

"There is over $100,000,000 available in savings banks in the Long Island area (New York) for investment in home financing if FHA is continued," Johnson said.

Exhibit for Hard of Hearing A Thing of Joy for Gadgeteers

The Washington Society for the Hard of Hearing is preparing for a flood of membership applications from persons with perfectly normal hearing.

Some of them slipped into the society's "gadget show" yesterday and were fascinated by a few of the appliances on display at 1116 Vermont avenue northwest.

Take the "vibration alarm clock," for instance. It's an oversized wrist watch that creates a throbbing at the appointed hour. No need to reach out of bed and turn the thing off or hide under the covers to get away from the clatter.

The society's "doorbell," which is nothing more than a simple circuit turning on an electric light when someone wants to come in, also attracted attention.

Another popular exhibit was special telephone equipment, which signals a call by flashing a light and enables the listener to regulate sound volume.

In Dayton, Ohio, where Miss Elizabeth Brand, new executive secretary of the Washington society, worked with the deaf until two months ago, the device was so popular that "people with normal hearing often came up to the club to make long-distance calls on our phone."

Another exhibit in constant use was a radio set with headphones operated on the bone induction principle. "No one else in the room can hear anything when I turn it on," Miss Brand explained.

Visitors viewed with open amusement the bulky instruments, loaned by the Volta Bureau and Army Medical Museum, used in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries as aids to the deaf. Among them was a flexible fan, nearly a foot in diameter, which a deaf person held well out in front of the face, clenching the tip between the teeth so as to convey sound by bone induction.

Murphy Asks Ratings for U. S. Deputies

Merit System Proposal To Congress Prompted By District Scandal

Civil Service status for thec ountry's 992 deputy United States marshals was recommended by Attorney General Murphy yesterday to Speaker Bankhead and Senator Ashurst (Democrat), of Arizona, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

The Attorney General submitted the draft of a bill in identical letters to the two legislators.

"There appears to be no reason why this group of officers should be excluded from the competitive classified civil service," Murphy said. "On the contrary, deputy marshals, whose duties are closely connected with the administration of justice, constitute a group of employes who should be clothed with a permanent career status and who should be selected on a merit basis. They should have the same retirement benefits as are enjoyed by all employes in the civil service."

Prompted by D. C. Care

Because temporary marshals are needed in emergencies, Murphy suggested that these be exempted, if they serve less than ten days. The proposed bill would give deputies now serving 90 days to qualify in non-competitive examinations to keep their jobs.

Deputy marshals are now appointed by United States marshals and receive from $1,800 to $3,700 a year. The average salary is $1,917.

The reform was indicated after the Warring jury tampering scandal here, which led to dismissal of several deputies and imprisonment of one, who pleaded guilty to bribery, for a year for criminal contempt of court.

Colpoys Approves

"I think it would be a good move," he said. "I have always been in favor of civil service for all Government embployes and I have fought for it for 30 years.'

District of Columbia marshals, Colpoys said, are a fine body of men and would have no trouble qualifying for their jobs.

Gallinger Compromise

In spite of confusing reports of the settlement of the Gallinger controversy, the public will be pleased to know that full control of the hospital and the medical service it renders will remain in the Health Department. It may be said that in some respects the contract entered into by the District Commissioners with George Washington and Georgetown Universities is a compromise. Yet it gives Health Officer Ruhland virtually everything for which he has contended.

The chief question at issue was whether the visiting staff from the two medical schools or the resident staff should exercise final authority on points of medical treatment at Gallinger. The issue has been resolved by denying authority to both groups and conferring it upon a new supervisor of medical services. That official, of course, will be chosen by the Health Department. It is understood that, in line with the recommendations of the United States Public Health Service, the new supervisor will not be chosen from either of the local schools.

The plan is contingent upon the appropriation of funds for the new medical chief, but there are hopeful indications that the money will be forthcoming. Since Congress has taken a special interest in Gallinger this year, it is quite possible that various other deficiencies in the institution may be remedied at the same time.

Heads of the local medical schools are to be congratulated on their acceptance of the new arrangement. It will give them all the facilities they need at the hospital for medical instruction. At the same time responsibility for medical care in this public institution will rest upon the Health Department, where it belongs. Certainly Gallinger should be operated primarily for the benefit of its patients.

Fortunately, too, various points of friction will be removed. Visiting physicians without adequate training or experience or who fail to render a specified amount of service will not remain on the list. It is understood, also, that the universities will grant clinical professorships to the five chief resident physicians so that they will occupy positions of equality with the chiefs of the visiting staff. The visiting physicians will retain their titles and will be consulted as to rules and policies.

This compromise, if such it is, should satisfy everyone. It is a tribute to all the principals who took part in the negotiations.

Tax Relief Plans

Last spring Congress passed a bill providing for a substantial modification of the taxes on undistributed profits and on capital gains, which became law without the President's signature. In spite of these liberalizing changes, however, the tax on capital gains still acts as a brake upon enterprise and an obstacle to reemployment. The levy on corporate income likewise is extremely burdensome, although only a vestige of the tax on undistributed profits remains.

One of the most encouraging recent developments is the change in the Administration's attitude toward proposals for a further lightening of taxes which act as a deterrent to business expansion. In recent conferences members of Congress and Treasury officials have discussed with the President the possibility of substituting a single tax on corporate income for the existing levies. No doubt consideration of proposals for abolition of the tax on undistributed profits would raise the question of further modification of the capital gains tax—a most important issue.

In addition to alleviation of tax burdens business seeks assurance that the scale of spending will be reduced, so that taxes can be safely modified. A mere readjustment of tax loads, to provide relief from particularly hampering forms of taxation, is not sufficient. There must be curtailment in expenditures to prevent deficits from mounting progressively. For the only alternative to a chronically and seriously unbalanced budget is crushing taxation which, directly or indirectly, has to be shouldered in large part by industry.

Until recently the theory that deficit financing aids business recovery has been in the ascendancy. It is the more interesting, therefore, to hear from Senator Harrison that the President is now "in thorough sympathy" with the idea of Government economies "if it can be done." Of course it can be done if the will is there. Perhaps the greatest obstacle to saving heretofore has been the assumption that a spending policy can dispense with its shadow of constantly rising taxes.

It will be very difficult to achieve scientific tax reform, on a scale adequate to bring encouragement to hard-pressed industries, unless it is coupled with governmental economies. If the Administration is awake to the necessity of achieving both objectives, and acts accordingly, it will be providing a most effective form of unemployment relief.

Unemployment Taxes

In these days of deficit financing it is positively startling to discover a public agency that has more money than it can use. Yet that is the situation confronting the District Unemployment Compensation Board. Last year receipts from the 3 per cent pay-roll tax levied on employers of insured workers brought in approximately $6,000,000, while benefits paid to the insured amounted to about one-third that figure. The accumulated reserve now totals about $10,000,000 and it is expected to reach $15,000,000 by the end of the present year.

Since the unemployment record of last year was unusually bad, it appears that these pay-roll levies are much too high. To some extent this is due to the fact that the local unemployment insurance law is too restrictive. But such liberalization as seems desirable would probably not add greatly to the cost of the system. If unemployment insurance is to be kept from degenerating into a dole, it is essential that benefits be limited in time and related to the amount earned by the insured individual.

More generous treatment might and should be accorded the unemployed who are able to supplement insurance benefits by wages from part time work or casual jobs. The District proviso that benefits shall be cut if an insured worker is earning over $2 per week seems too niggardly and is a positive encouragement to inaction. The present waiting period of three weeks is also much too long.

These defects could be corrected with little difficulty and at no great cost. The proposal to reduce pay-roll taxes is another matter. That can only be accomplished by relieving the District of the obligation to pay the 3 per cent Federal levies now imposed upon employers for unemployment insurance purposes.

To relieve the District of tax payments that are not needed and, as matters stand, cannot be used for the purposes intended, the McGehee bill recently introduced into the House provides for a complete separation of the District Unemployment Compensation Board from the Social Security Board. The local board would be empowered to set up and control a separate benefit account and to fix rates of contribution from employers to maintain a balance of approximately $10,000,000 to its credit with the United States Treasury. As that goal has already been reached the effect of this provision would be to cut the 3 per cent Federal levy to a considerably lower figure.

The desirability of such a reduction from the viewpoint of the tax-burdened business community of the District is unquestionable. The chief difficulty is due to the fact that, if exceptions are made for the District, pressure will be exerted to make similar concessions elsewhere.

In some States insurance benefits exceed current pay-roll tax receipts from employers. In other instances, payments are only slightly below receipts and in still other cases, the situation is similar to that prevailing in the District. In short, uniform Federal pay-roll levies appear to be ill-adjusted to the requirements of a system of unemployment insurance in which the States instead of the Federal Government are the legislative and administrative units.

The arrangement was admittedly a makeshift designed to force the States to pass unemployment insurance laws. In that respect it succeeded, but success in getting around constitutional obstacles to Nation-wide unemployment insurance has created the extraordinary situation that confronts the District today. Obviously the problem is of more than local importance, and is not to be hastily disposed of as a mere matter of municipal tax reduction.

Cat Out Of The Bag

At the time of the Lima conference, German newspapers outdid themselves in proclaiming that parley a dismal failure and Pan-Americanism a pricked balloon.

What the Nazi government really thought about this manifestation of inter-American solidarity was apparently rather different. At least that inference is justified by the speech which Gen. Wilhelm Faupel, German Ambassador to nationalist Spain in 1937, made in Berlin on the eve of the conclusion of the new Brazilian-American accord.

Far from discounting the Lima conference, Gen. Faupel now argues that it must be "evaluated as an attack on a grand scale against totalitarian states," with Germany particularly in mind. Nor does he show the slightest disposition to minimize the influence of the United States in Latin America, as the Nazi press has so repeatedly done. On the contrary it is his contention that the United States bids fair to secure the Western Hemisphere against political encroachment by the axis powers unless the latter bestir themselves.

Germany, he argues, must provide for a wholesale peaceful invasion of Latin America by German linguists, educators, scientists and engineers, and for return visits by South Americans in Germany. And the Reich must through radio, press and films preach the doctrine that "there is but one danger to Latin America—that is the United States."

Incidentally this speech provides further evidence of the great hopes placed by Germany in Gen. Franco's victory in the Spanish civil war. He clearly regards this as a weapon with which to offset American influence in Latin America. For in opposition to Pan-Americanism, says Gen. Faupel, there is the idea of Pan-Hispanism. And the triumph of fascism in Spain, in his belief, will cement bonds between Europe and Latin America, helping the latter to win "its struggle for freedom" from domination by Washington.

It is a speech which will be carefully studied in the Department of State. And all its implications should be examined before any consideration is given to the still premature question of American recognition of the nationalist regime in Spain.

Reasonable Irritation

Representative Kennedy has good reason to be irritated over the manner in which the District Commissioners have reacted to plans for reorganization of the local government. In spite of the urgent need for reform of Washington's hodgepodge political set-up, the Commissioners have taken a negative attitude. Undoubtedly some of their specific criticisms are sound. But the net effect of their testimony before Mr. Kennedy's committee has been to cloud the issue and discourage action of any kind.

Nor have the Commissioners strengthened their position by reviving the Prettyman report. This constructive plan for overhauling the local government was permitted to gather dust in the District Building until Mr. Kennedy and his colleagues attempted to act on their own initiative. Now the Commissioners indicate that even the Prettyman plan would be preferable from their viewpoint to the Griffenhagen plan. So they are throwing it into the pot, along with divergent suggestions of their own.

It is hard to believe that pure ignorance explains the way in which the Commissioners have confused the issue of granting the District the powers of an ordinary municipal corporation. They contended that Congress should not set up a "governing legislative body" here unless it intends to delegate a "large measure of its legislative authority" over the District to the local community. In the larger sense of course Congress can not delegate its legislative authority. But that would not prevent it from setting up a local governing body and conferring upon it ordinance-making powers similar to those granted by State legislatures to their cities.

This smoke-screen is the more puzzling because of the Commissioners' own efforts, in the past, to secure enlarged powers of local government here.

The Commissioners' hostile attitude undoubtedly casts a dark shadow over the Griffenhagen plan. But there is no reason why this shadow should be permanent. There is widespread agreement on the most vital steps necessary to give Washington a modern government. That fact will be emphasized when the Prettyman report is laid beside the Griffenhagen recommendations.

Indeed, a few basic principles are to be found in every study of the District government. It is agreed that Washington should be granted a municipal charter, giving it full municipal ordinance-making powers; that all agencies serving municipal functions (except the school board and other normally independent agencies) should be unified under a single local government; that administrative units should be departmentalized, and that the local government should be granted a larger degree of budgetary independence. Beyond this is a general desire for some local voice in the control of purely municipal affairs.

In spite of differences over the type of governing body it should certainly be possible to draft satisfactory legislation embodying these basic objectives. Congress, as well as the local community, is vitally interested in such changes, since they would relieve that body of an unnatural burden. It is to be hoped that Mr. Kennedy and has colleagues will not be diverted from this important task by the lack of co-operation from the District Building.

"Most people can't stand prosperity," declares a sociologist. Most people don't have to.

The Joyous Jitters

From the Worcester (Mass.) Telegram

Amusement parks have profited from the fact that terror is sometimes good entertainment. So, the New York World's Fair is going to add terror to its quieter features. It is to have a roller coaster. Of course, it is to be "bigger, faster, steeper, deeper dips, more sensational, scarier, more thrilling than any ride at any previous fair."

To the timid soul, the roller coaster is something to avoid. It is not easy to understand why anyone should want to be made uncomfortable, and to be frightened. The screams that come from the passengers on the cars on the serpentine tracks are not reassuring. The timid soul can enjoy the roller coaster in only one way, and that is by standing on firm ground, and watching others enjoy their suffering.

The Local Strike

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial on the hotel strike in The Post of March 9 should be read by every worker and employer in the District; in fact, by everyone who desires amicable relations between the two groups. It is a fair statement of the question.

The Women's Trade Union League of this city supports the strike of the hotel workers. The organizing committee of that organization wishes to congratulate you on the stand you have taken in the editorial. We hope that your paper will do everything in its power to get the two groups together so that a foundation can be laid "for better working conditions and better service through peaceful negotiation."

MRS. ANNIE STEIN,
Chairman of Organizing Committee of the Washington Committee of the Women's Trade Union League.
Washington, March 9.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to express the appreciation of myself and my associates for the editorial concerning the hotel strike which appeared in The Post of March 9.

It was a singularly thoughtful and fair-minded article and one which showed an unusual amount of knowledge and understanding of labor economics.

Such editorials, we repeat, are a distinct credit to the newspaper in which they appear.

R. KENNETH OAKLEY.

King and Democracy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Replying to articles of Charles W. Bishop and Harry A. Magee, who assume that anybody who does not agree with this Administration's foreign policy is a pacifist, let me remind them that it has been published in every principal newspaper in the country that the King of England and Emperor of India is to visit this country in June, as the leader of European democracy.

Are We Tolerant?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To a man born and bred in the South, where the population is almost entirely homogeneous, it is a revelation, and not a pleasant one at that, to note the conditions confronting the heterogeneous population of the Eastern section of our country. I have concluded, with the most probative evidence that though we accuse others of racial and religious intolerance, we have no tolerance ourselves. Witness the following facts:

Miss Thompson, one of our brilliant writers, goes to a meeting of German-American citizens, accompanied by a former prize fighter as a bodyguard, and, as she herself has expressed it, "with a purpose." During the speech she laughed aloud as part of her purpose. Thereby she objected to an orderly meeting. Is that tolerance?

The press, the radio and all other mediums of expression are laden with propaganda. This sort of stuff is laden with explosives. It has as its offspring the secret meeting of the darkened room, because the open forum is denied. Revolutions are planned and consummated in the cloistered cells of secrecy; not in the open forum where free expression is encouraged. Free expression is not encouraged in America.

These things are not propitious. Roman Catholics, Protestants and Jews, as well as all other persons of whatever religious faith are, or should be, equals to enjoy the blessings of a democracy such as ours is supposed to be. Twenty-three years ago, President Theodore Roosevelt said:

"The one absolutely certain way of bringing this Nation to ruin—of preventing all possibility of its continuing to be a Nation at all—would be to permit it to become a tangle of squabbling nationalities."

HARMONY.

Christian Refugees

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Once again the word "refugee" is on everyone's lips, and once again this country must share in the great humanitarian task of helping that vast army of distressed humans who, for religious, intellectual and political reasons, can find no place in the "Aryan" fascist world created by Adolf Hitler.

This modern refugee from the Third Reich is, in most instances, a cultured individual, representative of the finest type of German. He may be a Jew, a Catholic or Protestant. The persistent attacks upon the Christian Church in Germany and Austria and the repressive non-Aryan laws which affect baptized Christians of partial Jewish ancestry as well as full-blooded Jews have forced thousands of Christian families and individuals out of the Third Reich and left them stranded in other countries, beseeching immediate aid if they are to survive.

Always, the Christian churches of America have responded to the call of humans in distress, whatever their race, nation or creed. Now it is their own fellow Christians, exiled from their native land, who are in need. Surely they will not abandon them, nor thrust them upon the Jewish refugee relief agencies, whose burden is already too large.

The American Committee for Christian German Refugees, of which Thomas Mann, himself a Protestant refugee from Germany, is honorary chairman, and James M. Speers, chairman, is faced with the task of arousing Christians in this country to the plight of these non-Jewish refugees, and in raising funds to save them from the acute distress they are now suffering.

Children born into Christian-Jewish families are among the most pitiable victims of the German fascist regime. Segregated in the schools, derided by their classmates, they are forced to endure an inhuman mental cruelty. To save them further suffering, their parents, in many cases, send them out of Germany. Funds are needed to care for and educate these children in England and other countries where provisions have been made for their welfare.

These Christian refugees are fighting for survival. By helping them, we are helping to preserve the spirit of religious liberty and freedom of conscience which brought our own ancestors to the shores of a brave, new world 300 years ago.

FRANK RITCHIE.
Executive Director, the American Committee for Christian German Refugees.

Gallinger Hospital

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wanted to commend your informative and objective discussion of the Gallinger Hospital matter in this morning's Post. I know nothing whatever about the merits of both sides to the controversy. I have been wondering what it was all about. I do know that you have handled the subject well.

Such eminently fair and intelligent discussion is so far superior to the usual one-sided ranting in which so many press writers indulge that I feel inclined to register an affirmative vote for it. You did much to clarify the issue and to take the heat out of a situation that can only be worked out for the public good in a cool, rational way.

"The Siege of Rajkot"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Allow me, please, to congratulate you on your editorial in today's paper, entitled, "The Siege of Rajkot."

To my mind it deserves to be preserved as one of the great productions of American writers, and to me it was a reinspiration in a world of chaos and darkness.

W. L. GIBSON.

Congress And The District Of Columbia

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your issue of March 8 Mr. Nichols, chairman of the sub-committee of the District in the House of Representatives, was quoted as saying: Ninety-eight per cent of the people in my district have never been in Washington and they wouldn't care if the Department of Commerce were housed in a tent. And, furthermore, if the District keeps complaining about the amount allotted to it by the Congress they are liable to lose all of it."

This pronouncement very well illustrates the attitude of the vast majority of members of Congress toward the District and its needs. The mind of the average Congressman apparently never rises above the level of his own home town where the votes are and if Podunk, or Turkey Run, or Hard Scrabble cannot have a Department of Commerce or a Lincoln Memorial or a Library of Congress, or its cash equivalent, then, by jumpin' Jehosaphat, the District of Columbia ought not to have any either!

Congressmen seem to forget that this city was created out of whole cloth for the sole purpose of housing the Federal Government. There was no other earthly reason for having another large city within 40 miles of Baltimore which for two centuries has served as the metropolis of this section of the country. But this bare spot on the banks of the Potomac was selected as the home for the Federal Government and here has grown a city of 630,000 inhabitants, one-half of whom consist of Government employes and their families and the other half comprises the various activities of life necessary to the support and well-being of these Government employes.

The responsibility of the Federal Government for this city was so clearly marked that for a long term of years the Government contributed 50 per cent of its cost of maintenance. In recent years this amount has been steadily reduced until now the Government contributes only about 8 per cent of the city's maintenance, and this in face of the fact that the Government is steadily acquiring and withdrawing from the tax lists large tracts of the most valuable real estate in the District, thus greatly reducing its tax revenue. If the Government would pay the regular tax rate on the property it owns in the District it would be an entirely different story. Senator Overton recognizes this and is advocating a readjustment of the proportion of Federal contributions along this line.

Meanwhile, the hapless citizens of the District are completely under the control of members of Congress whose attitude of mind is clearly expressed by Mr. Nichols. And these citizens have no voice in the matter, no representation in that Congress which disposes of their most vital affairs in this flippant way. These citizens, in fact, are not citizens at all. They are deprived of the very fundamental rights guaranteed by the Constitution. They are denied the right of suffrage, the right of representation. In all this broad land the one spot where an American citizen is not a citizen and has no rights as such is in the National Capital! Think of it! And how long are we going to stand for it?

EDWARD CLEMENT.

Fresh Air

IT HAS LONG AGO ceased being a habit and has finally assumed the proportions of a mania. I mean this business of not being able to get any fresh air in Washington. It sounds ridiculous and it is ridiculous. When you consider that practically all of Washington spends at least a part of every day indoors, you'd think those people would clamor for fresh air and a little exercise as a contrast. But not those pepole.

To begin with there are the buses. Of course, it's not the fault of the buses themselves, but of the people who ride them. Look at them—men and women—white-faced office workers, their heads buried in newspapers or their eyes glued—literally—to their knitting. All breathing the same air over and over again, simply because no one has the courage to open a window. If he did, the whole crowd would turn on him. I know.

I know because the other day I managed to sit by a window and what's more I managed to open it. Immediately, the large lady by my side rose, turned, and in a loud voice said to a girl behind her, "Lois! Don't you dare sit by that open window!" Whereupon, without a word, the large lady calmly supported herself on my head and banged the window shut. No one spoke. The large lady again sank down beside me, and on we rode... I thought of all kinds of things to do, but the odds were against me.

Then there are the offices of Washington. As you might expect, they have windows in them. These windows allow views of various sorts, on certain days admit sunshine—but rarely any fresh air. Now I've never lived on the open prairies and I like sleeping under a roof. I don't like a draught because if I sit in one I catch a cold the same as anyone else. But a constant, even supply of fresh air—warmed when necessary—prevents headaches, saves tempers and, though you may say what you please, increases office output.

You can't blame one sex any more than the other. I learned that at a businessmen's luncheon. We sat in a small hotel dining room, nearly 100 men, with the customary fruit cup in front of us, the customary bang and clatter of crockery all about, and the customary declamation going on at the speakers' table. I didn't mind that. The cigarette smoke was perfectly all right. But the air!

Well, I got a waiter and finally after some effort on my part got across what it was I wanted. He nodded vigorously, and actually did open a single window about 6 inches. In came the curtains billowing—because there were no ventilators of any kind—and people stopped talking to look around. In five minutes a man rose, but I didn't have the heart to look. I just listened while he slammed it down.

It's the same everywhere. In elevators, in those buildings that are air-conditioned in hot weather. And have you tried a night club! The only things comparable I can think of are the monkey cages at the Zoo and a New York subway where they have springs on the doors to eliminate the slightest possibility of a bit of second class air that's never been above ground from getting into the train.

I realize how little is one feeble voice crying out in the wilderness of our effete and hypersensitive civilization, but the other afternoon—a clear beautiful day, one of those that herald spring and yet hold the faintest breath of winter—I couldn't help standing on the street corner and watching the cars swirl by. Now, I'll admit, as quickly as anyone, that what people do in their own cars is their own business. Yet I give my word that more people had their windows closed, many of them smoking as they rode by, than had them open. How they ever get from the curbing, across a pavement and into a door is more than I can understand.

That old adage, "If you don't like the weather in Washington, wait a minute," may be true, but some times I wonder what our worthy citizenry would do if they lived in either the Arctic or the Torrid zones. I'm neither sadistic nor vindictive, but it gives me pleasure to picture them in first one and then the other. The only thing about this that hurts is the simple fact that they don't know what I'm thinking.

It's understood that every dog has his day, and I guess I've had mine. It's true I had to leave the District of Columbia to get it, but it was worth it. Well bundled, with the top down and the winter sun on the road and fields, we drove to Annapolis and the Matapeake Ferry across the Chesapeake Bay. The afternoon was clear and crisp and a little cold. Standing on the top leeward deck, I watched the bright, golden sun shine on the water and actually pitied all those—those—others.

Once on the level Eastern Sho' of Maryland, we drove to Salisbury. Oysters for dinner. An early start the next day and on to Ocean City with a quick run along the deserted boardwalk before the barred-up cottages. Then up the ocean's edge we drove, over a road between sand dunes covered with dry rustling grass, to Rehoboth Beach, in Delaware. And back to Matapeake, to Annapolis, to Washington that night. A fine mist collected on the windshield, but we made it with the top still down.

Fair Enough

False Statements

ORDINARILY, when customers write letters faulting these dispatches I just let them have their say without carrying the dispute into extra innings. But two letters have been received and printed about a recent story on the state of the Irish immigrants in this country back in the last century which call for rebuttal. I am not going to try to tell in a few words what I then wrote to the length of a whole column, but I am going to nail a few lies.

Some people make a habit of reading into copy statements which are not there. Maybe they just can't read straight, but, whatever the reason—and I don't think they are honestly mistaken—I often find that I am challenged and rebuked for saying things I didn't say.

One who signs himself Niall Oren Meagher writes in a letter published in the New York World-Telegram that I said the Irish immigrants were despised. That word does not occur in the copy, but, since Mr. Meagher mentions it, all right; they were despised by many of the native Americans, and that is not my testimony but the testimony of history. They were subjected to about the same kind of treatment that would be meted to the Jews if the Nazi friends of Father Coughlin could have their way in this country. Lace curtains and 75 years have made a big difference in the Coughlins.

Mr. Pegler Hurls A Few Harsh Words

MR. MEAGHER says I wrote the Irish were "a problem to America."

That's a lie. I didn't say it.

He says I wrote that the Irish were "radicals."

That is a lie, too. I didn't say it. I don't know what he means by "radicals," but I didn't use the word at all, or anything like it.

He says I said that the slogan "throughout the business world" was "No Irish Need Apply." That is a half lie. I said there was open prejudice against the Irish and that this phrase was used in employment ads.

He says I said the Irish were not good farmers. That is a full-sized lie. I said they did not take readily to farming but colonized in the cities. I don't know whether they were good farmers or not, and didn't attempt to say.

Was Merely Trying To Prove A Point

SO THAT IS the score for accuracy and veracity of a man who says I am "occasionally nonfactual," and anyone who wants to check may refer to the date of February 24, when the story appeared.

He also says I am illogical, and drags in, as a refutation of history, the records of many Americans with Irish names. Aside from the fact that Americans are Americans, whatever their names, these records have no bearing on the situation which I discussed. I was showing that in the time of Coughlin's own grandparents in this country the Irish were the victims of persecution for their race and religion and, incidentally, for a few honest imperfections of their own.

I was making the point that a man of Irish descent looks like hell whipping up persecution of more recent immigrants to this country. Citation of the fact that within a couple of generations the sons of those victims of bigotry and discrimination became distinguished Americans—distinguished Americans, mind you, not distinguished Irishmen — cannot be construed into an attack on the Irish or their American descendants, either.

Denies Belittling Of Irish Courage

AS TO MR. MEAGHER'S further remark that 175,000 Irishmen fought with the Northern army in the Civil War, however, it must be said further that that many Irishmen fought on the Southern side, too. It was not a private fight.

In The Washington Post, M. V. Gannon said I animadverted against the courage of the Irish. That is a lie. There was nothing like that in the copy, and Mr. Gannon invented this charge to provide himself a chance to sound off in defense of Irish courage—a cheap and familiar political work. On that score the copy only quoted the Encyclopedia's account of the Battle of Fort Erie and was careful to balance that with a contrary and rather boastful account from a patriotic Irish book.

It is fascinating to watch some cunning correspondents invent slights to avenge. As I say, ordinarily, yesterday's story is water over the dam, but today I had my hammer out and thought I would nail a few lies.

The Aerial Weapon

By S. Miles Bouton

Has Its Power Been Exaggerated?

IT SEEMS UNDISPUTED that one reason for the Munich surrender was Prime Minister Chamberlain's fear of the German air force, and the last weeks have seen a number of articles and reports in American magazines and newspapers dealing with that force and attempting to estimate its strength and importance in warfare. Of that importance General Field Marshal Hermann Goering, head of the force, has no doubts. On February 1 he issued a further decree for the strengthening of its striking force, and in January new courses of instruction in military aviation were introduced for the Storm Troopers and the National Socialist Motor Drivers Corps.

At least one prominent officer of the general staff believes that the importance of the air arm has been exaggerated, and a lively discussion has followed the submission by him to the censors' department of the war ministry of the manuscript of a book entitled "The Art of War Today and Tomorrow." The author is Col. Foertsch. Since the treatise concerns itself chiefly with the question as to the strategic value of the air arm in modern warfare, the war ministry's censors declared that they lacked the competence to give a general permission to publish, but approved it for instruction in the war academies and military schools and referred it to the air ministry for further action.

This ministry also approved it for teaching purposes, but Goering then intervened, since he was not in agreement with Col. Foertsch's opinion that the air force was of only secondary importance in warfare. Through intervention by Rudolf Hess, who appears, by the way, to stand closer to Hitler than is generally believed, the Fuehrer was asked to decide the question. He decided that even if the book's conclusions were wrong, the arguments to support them disclosed such a great number of possible sources of error that they could be used in the schools for furthering technical and strategic criticism, but only for that purpose.

The 'Weapon Free In Space' Theory

THE DOCTRINE that in modern warfare the land and sea forces will no longer play a decisive role and hence can be neglected in considerable degree, since in future wars the air force alone or in greatly predominating degree can decide the conflict on water and on land, writes Col. Foertsch, comes from the Italian Gen. Douhet and his adherents. Douhet believes that the land and sea forces will in future be merely defensive arms, and that attack and hence the decision will be the work of the airplane. For this is a "raumungebundene Waffe" (weapon free in space), which can avoid every attack without battle and can attack and destroy any goal and any defense as well on sea as on land.

The value of fortifications and other defenses is destroyed by this arm, the fields of battle are unlimited, and former conceptions of time and space no longer exist, says Douhet. Airplanes could carry out attacks on a single point with a concentration of destructive methods such as is impossible for land and sea forces. They could inflict such damage on enemy residence and industrial districts and also on highways, bridges, canals, and so on and—assuming sufficient concentration—such tremendous damage that the enemy's will to resist would be broken.

Therefore victory could be achieved with the air arm faster than with any other weapon. The condition precedent would be the securing of absolute domination of the air at the beginning of the war by the destruction of enemy air bases, airplanes and airplane factories. Douhet and his followers, says Col. Foertsch, regard war in the air as the cheapest form, on condition that money spent for fortifications be spent rather for airplanes and that the land and sea forces be built up only so far as they are needed as bases for the air force.

THIS SEEMS also to be in the main Goering's view, but Col. Foertsch rejects it. The air weapon, he writes, has, to be sure, gained a position as an independent war force, but only in theory, not in practice. It could be admitted that, with mass employment of its small airplanes as "air infantry" and of its armored planes as "air cruisers," it could achieve locally decisive effects—but only local. The Italian theory, says the colonel, assumes that the static (trench) warfare as the unconquerable form of land conflict, but this is utterly false, for all technic and tactics of land warfare are aimed at breaking through the fortified positions of the enemy, and the practical lessons of the World War as well as of the Spanish War have left no doubt that a breach in the enemy fortifications means an advance. The static war's inmost character is that of an economic war, which the Italians have failed to realize, although Germany has realized it.

Moreover, writes Col. Foertsch, the Italian theory makes the mistake of regarding domination of the air as equivalent to domination of the land, and in so doing concludes erroneously that it is possible to compel the enemy to fight in the air. But precisely as there is no such thing as mastery of the sea, so there is also no absolute mastery of the air. In both cases mastery can be won only within certain restricted areas and only during certain times, namely, only there and only so long as the enemy forces which one meets are either defeated or do not show themselves. The would-be attacker can never be assured that the opponent will not avoid battle. Nor can he prevent the enemy from dispersing his air forces among many different bases, from altering their position in the night, or from creating possibilities of camouflage and defense which compel the attacker to divide his forces, with the possibility of the enemy's falling upon one of the attacker's thus divided forces with superior strength.

Air Cannot Be 'Occupied'

How, asks Col. Foertsch further, could the attacker, bent on securing mastery of the air, assure himself that the enemy would not at the same time attempt similar attacks to secure mastery for himself? For the air is a three-dimensional space, in which there can be no lasting mastery. What one cannot occupy cannot be held in possession permanently. This might be possible on narrow air routes, but is impossible in unlimited spaces.

Furthermore, Col. Foertsch goes on, the Italian theory has failed to take into account the limits set by the weather and the force of gravity. The possibilities of blind flying and of bombing from high up in the clouds are still restricted to tactical maneuvers. The air weapon is dependent on good weather, but wars are fought also in bad weather. The technical possibilities of accurate bombing have, to be sure, been highly developed, but accuracy is still always and decisively influenced by the height from which the bombs are dropped. The ancient law of warfare, that new weapons are followed by new defenses, has brought about methods of resisting aerial warfare which compel the flyer to mount to heights where he can achieve only greatly decreased effects.

And, finally, the air weapon is always bound to a land base and has a limited radius of action. Thus one must not underestimate the danger of the attacker being cut off from return to his base, which could happen through occupation of that base by the enemy.

The air weapon, says the colonel in conclusion, has changed the aspect of warfare by the possibility of the "vertical assaults" on the enemy, but despite all that, the decision in any coming war can be reached only by a combination of land and air warfare, not by the airplane as chief weapon.

THE GERMAN STRATEGISTS —and also, it would seem, Mr. Chamberlain and his supporters—seem to have overlooked one factor in their probable assumption, voiced also by Gen. Douhet, that "the enemy's will to resist would be broken" by sufficient bombing from the air. London had a taste of it in the World War, and every taste saw thousands of new volunteers rushing to arms. When the Germans began bombarding Paris with the Big Bertha 72 miles away, they were confident that the French morale would disintegrate as soon as a few shells dropped into town. The result was the same as in London—rage and increased determination to resist to the death.

But Berlin and other large German cities have had no experience along these lines. An unusually competent observer has but recently reported that Hitler has lost popularity lately—and my own reports are to the same effect—and that Mr. Chamberlain is popular and somewhat of a hero because he avoided war by the surrender at Munich. No people wants war, but the Germans want it least of all. They remember things, including that terrible "turnip winter."

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Way The World Is Moving

ONE OF THE disadvantages of an education that is almost wholly concerned with current events and contemporary ideas is that it takes so long to rediscover truths that were once known and have since been forgotten. All over the world, for example, men are concerned about war and about revolution. For more than 20 years they have been the subject of a very large part of the news in the daily press. In discussions of all kinds they have been the two dominating themes about which men have talked. Yet it is only recently that some have begun to understand that in the world today war and revolution are so profoundly interrelated that they are two aspects of the same thing.

Our ancestors of a hundred and fifty years ago understood what we are just beginning to rediscover. They lived in an age which was as revolutionary as our own, and even more warlike. They learned that a deep social revolution, like that which took place in France in 1789, and the wars of Napoleon which grew out of the revolution were a single and inseparable historic event, that the restoration of international peace and the end of the revolution were two names for the same fact.

We're Ill-Prepared To Understand Period

THIS CONNECTION between great social revolution and great international war was forgotten in the nineteenth century. The reason is that for a hundred years after Waterloo there was no great war. The generation to which we belong, old men as well as the most recent graduates of schools and colleges, possesses a political education based almost exclusively on the experience of the century between the battle of Waterloo and the battle of the Marne.

In that century there were many little local revolutions, but there was no great social revolution anywhere. There were many short localized wars, but there was no great war. As a result we have learned to think that a revolution is one thing, a war is another thing. Before 1914 the only revolutionists we knew about were the old Socialists and they were pacifists, antinational and antimilitarist; the only warlike parties we knew about were conservative, nationalist and imperialist. This experience has miseducated us. We are ill-prepared to understand the period in which we are living when it is the radical revolutionists who are most imperialist and most militarist and most nationalist, when it is the conservative parties who are the most pacifist.

Two Great Revolts In Europe Since 1917

IF WE ARE to understand the real situation, and then to know what measures will be really effective, we must learn to appreciate the fact that since 1917 there have been two successive great revolutions in Europe, the Russian and the German, and that each has sought to conquer Europe. Now, it is the essence of revolutionary imperialism that it makes its conquests not by frontal attack, but by promoting revolution among the people it intends to subjugate.

In the past 20 years we have seen the penetration of Russian revolutionary imperialism into Hungary, Poland, Bavaria, the Rhineland, into northern Italy, into Spain, into northwestern China. We have then seen the penetration of German national Socialist imperialism into Austria, the Sudeten territory, into Slovakia, into Hungary and Rumania, and into Italy.

Perhaps the greatest of all the National Socialist conquests has been Italy, for it is only since the Nazi revolution that Fascist Italy has become itself truly revolutionary. Before the Italian catastrophe of the Austrian affair Fascist Italy was, of course, a dictatorship with some, by no means unreasonable, imperialist ambitions. But Italian Fascism was neither deeply revolutionary in character nor disposed to challenge profoundly the foundations of European order. Only in the past two years has Italy become entangled in the great revolutionary movement and in the general international disturbance which is its external manifestation.

Why Mussolini Acted Cautiously

The fact that revolution and war are at present two aspects of the same thing is visible from many different angles. For example, it is certainly no coincidence that the day selected for the Italian demonstration demanding Tunis and Corsica and Savoy was the day before the French general strike; there can be little doubt that the warlike demonstration was made in the belief that France was on the verge of a social revolution, and that it was the failure of the general strike and the remarkable recovery in France which have caused Mussolini to act so much more cautiously.

We can see the same thing in Spain. The prospect of an end to the civil war is viewed with as little pleasure in Rome, which is supposedly on the winning side, as in Moscow, which is on the losing side. The reason is plain. The end of the civil war in Spain, the liquidation of the "ideological" conflict between the revolutionary movements is likely to mean a notable lessening of the internal divisions in France and in all the rest of western Europe. This promises to enhance their powers of resistance to aggression and to intimidation, to reduce the opportunities for revolutionary imperialist conquest in western Europe.

So we shall see, I venture to predict, that just as the outlook for international peace has greatly improved since the western democracies recovered from the shock of Munich, so the revolutionary energies which have been boiling up out of Germany and Russia will diminish. If the orderly nations can keep their nerve and their steadfastness through the year ahead, they will avert both war and revolution. They will have made war a strategic impossibility, and they will have made the future of the German and the Russian revolution a domestic question inside of Germany and of Russia.

The evidence of this evolution in the world's affairs will be something that many who are most ardently and sincerely anti-Fascist have not anticipated. They will find, I believe, that as the resistance of mankind to war becomes actual in the production of sufficient armaments, and as the will to resist aggression becomes more deeply aroused in the masses of men, the dominant instinct of mankind will be to draw its strength from the will to conserve the traditions of the western world.

World-Wide Longing Toward Peace, Order

WE ARE WITNESSING, I think, a worldwide reaction against revolutionary war and warlike revolution, and in this reaction, which is deeply defensive, the temper of men will be profoundly conservative. There is a longing in men, so strong that it will be dangerous for any government to deny it, towards peace, order, liberty, and the chance for the pursuit of private happiness. This longing will manifest itself not only in a determination to stand firm against any further troubling of the peace but in the dissolution, now plainly in process, of the compromising alliances that now exist between conservatives and revolutionary fascism, between liberals and revolutionary communism.

That is what has happened in France since about December 1. To those who can read the signs of the times, as for example, the little row in the Lawyers Guild, or the somewhat bigger row in the C.I.O., it will be fairly apparent that this is what is now about to happen here.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Imaginary Cross-Examinations

(District Attorney Dewey on the Presidency.)

Q.—Mr. Dewey, you are aware that you are being widely talked of as a candidate for the Presidency of the United States, are you not?

A.—My first duties are as district attorney of New York and . . .

Q.—Answer "yes" or "no."

A.—Well, you see, the convention is a long way off and it would not be advisable for me to . . .

Q.—I object to the witness making a long speech. All I wish is a direct answer to a direct question, which I now repeat: you are aware that you are being widely talked of as a candidate for the Presidency, are you not?

A.—I have heard some talk of it, yes, but at this time . . .

Q.—Never mind the "buts," Mr. Dewey.

A.—I desire at this time to state my reactions and . . .

Q.—We will come to that later. Now then, Mr. Dewey, you are aware, are you not, of the value of your work as district attorney in advancing your candidacy?

A.—I do not regard myself at this time as a candidate.

Q.—I will put the question in another form: would you consent to run for the Presidency of the United States?

A.—I object to that question.

Q.—On what grounds?

A.—On the ground that the subject has not been properly introduced. I further object to the question as a hypothetical one.

Q.—Well, suppose I lay the groundwork. Mr. Dewey, where were you born?

A.—In a Western town.

Q.—It was a small Western town in a big Western State, was it not?

A.—Yes sir.

Q.—Were you born in a log cabin?

A.—I think it premature to go into that at this early stage.

Q.—As a boy, did you study hard by the light from burning logs in the open fireplace, Mr. Dewey?

A.—I refuse to answer that question.

Q.—On what grounds?

A.—On the ground it may conflict with what my publicity staff may say later.

Q.—From your early boyhood you yearned to be a good public servant, did you not?

A.—No. My first ambition was to be a concert singer.

Q.—Would you like to become a great concert singer now?

A.—No. Why?

Q.—Because I think a lot of influential Tammany men would fix it for you.

A.—I've had offers of help in any career if I'd stop prosecuting.

Q.—Mr. Dewey, what are your politics?

A.—I belong to the jungle branch of the G. O. P.

Q.—What do you mean by the jungle branch?

A.—I love tiger hunting.

Q.—Are you any relation to Admiral Dewey?

A.—Only distantly.

Q.—What do you mean by distantly?

A.—He got within distance of the White House, too.

Q.—Do you recall what killed his candidacy?

A.—It was something about what he did with a house. I'm keeping away from that.

Q.—What way?

A.—I'm dealing only with wigwams.

Business Soothing

By Mark Sullivan

Roosevelt Now Woos

AT THE WHITE HOUSE press conference a newspaperman said he understood there was objection to use of the word "appeasement" to describe the Administration's new attitude toward business. He asked President Roosevelt if he cared to suggest another word.

Ordinarily, Mr. Roosevelt is extremely quick in his comebacks. But this time he was cautious. He pondered a moment and then said he thought of two words, but he would not mention them because they might be misinterpreted. Humorously, Mr. Roosevelt suggested that words are the business of newspapermen, and that they ought to appoint a committee to think up the right word. In the spirit of badinage he appointed the committee then and there; it is to report at the next press conference. After next Tuesday, if the newspaper committee is good at its job, and if the fruit of their deliberations pleases the President, we shall know just what word describes the present attitude of the Administration.

No doubt this genial enterprise of word-hunting is not limited to the newspaper committee. Already some one has said Mr. Roosevelt just wants to give business a little "come-hither" sign, wants to make "goo-goo" eyes at them.

Business Vamping Arouses Jealousy

THAT FIGUURE of speech carries us into an area that also includes the green-eyed monster. And jealousy is precisely what Mr. Roosevelt has aroused since he showed a tendency to flirt with business. Some of the more radical among his associates suspect him of jilting them. Washington gossip says that within the group of intimate advisers who are sometimes called the "palace pets" there is sadness and bitterness, fluttering of angry wings in the White House dove cote. Among what Gen. Hugh Johnson's Byzantine vocabulary sometimes calls "the janizaries," and other times designates by Bagdad terms less complimentary, there is recrimination.

One of the group close to the throne has been—and so far as anybody knows, still is—Mr. Harry Hopkins. Indeed Mr. Hopkins has long been supposed to be the innermost of the group. But now the others suspect him of faithlessness. Sadly they quote, "Just for a handful of silver he left us, just for a ribbon to stick in his coat"—the silver and the ribbon, in this complex figure of speech, being of course merely the honor Mr. Hopkins received in his appointment to the Cabinet as Secretary of Commerce, with its presumed obligation to be nice to business. Between Mr. Hopkins and his former associates in the White House circle, there is now dissension. Mr. Hopkins has the reputation of being a good fighter, and name caller. At the same time, the others in that curious group have infinite and esoteric expertness in the art of getting the President to go their way.

Meanwhile, on the part of businessmen just now sweating over their income tax reports, there will be anxiety to know just what, and how much, there is in this appeasement, or whatever is to be the word for it after next Tuesday. The answer is, "well, maybe a good deal, maybe not a great deal." It is pretty synthetic.

'Give Business Hell' Was 1938 Attitude

THE NEW DEAL has an art of projecting through the country waves of sentiment, of whatever sort they feel their momentary need calls for. One of their methods is to have two or three persons high in the Administration make speeches or give out public statements, and then follow that up with a synchronized barrage from publicity men and other official propagandists.

A little over a year ago they thought their need was to "give business hell." Industrial conditions had become bad, and the Administration was being reproached. The New Dealers adopted that military strategy which says the best defense is offense. They had two persons high in the Administration, Solicitor General Jackson and Secretary of the Interior Ickes, deliver the opening cannonade. Both made practically simultaneous speeches excoriating business—Mr. Ickes is awful good at excoriation, he's the head excoriator in the Administration. Mr. Ickes accused business of being on a strike, a sit-down strike at that. He said that America is owned by 60 families and that "it must be a fight to the finish—until America's 60 families or America's 120,000,000 people win."

That "60 families" slogan, the whole antibusiness barrage, was not very successful. To charge that businessmen deliberately refrain from doing business just didn't seem to make sense. It was like charging that squirrels don't hunt nuts. That onslaught was abandoned, but the method remains. The same method is now being used, with a changed objective. The present objective is to feed a little molasses to business with a view to getting better industrial conditions until next year's Presidential election.

As to whether the appeasement, or whatever it is to be called, is kept up, businessmen will just have to gamble. They will have to gamble on Mr. Roosevelt's permanence of program—in the past he has not been conspicuous for continuity of intention. They will have to gamble also about the intimates around Mr. Roosevelt who do not want him to appease business. In the past those intimates have usually been able so to play upon Mr. Roosevelt's temperament as to get him to go their way. On the other hand, some of the intimates approve Mr. Roosevelt's encouragement to business; and he has a political motive for that course.

Accord With Brazil

By Barnet Nover

Uncle Sam Helps A Neighbor

IT IS POSSIBLE to discuss the agreements which the United States has just concluded with Brazil solely in economic and financial terms. But it would be naive to do so. The Brazilian-American record has an economic superstructure of rather impressive dimensions. But its base is unmistakably political.

Were the United States less concerned than it is over present world developments, less anxious to improve relations between ourselves and our neighbors to the South, less alarmed over the possibilities of Fascist penetration and Fascist aggression in this hemisphere, a perfectly sound case could still be made out for the Brazilian deal.

Foreign trade is important to us and Brazil happens to be a tremendously large nation which sells much to us, buys a good deal and might buy a good deal more, given the opportunity. There is every reason, therefore, why the United States should seek to cultivate the Brazilian market and help in the development of Brazil's vast but largely unexploited resources.

Since one of Brazil's major difficulties during recent years has been its exchange situation which has not only inhibited payments on its bonds but has also hampered its trade, there is every reason as well why the United States should also do what it can to help Brazil surmount her exchange difficulties.

BUT THAT is by no means all there is to the Brazilian-American picture.

At Lima, some months ago, the United States did all in its power to achieve a large measure of moral unity among the 21 republics of this hemisphere. This effort met with a very considerable degree of success. But declarations of solidarity, useful in themselves, are not enough if the danger from overseas is effectively to be overcome. The will to escape the impact of totalitarian philosophies and the pressure emanating from Berlin, Rome and Tokyo must, obviously, be supplemented by practical measures.

From this point of view, the Brazilian-American accord constitutes the first major step in the direction of implementing the Declaration of Lima, at least so far as this country and Brazil are concerned.

Brazil's Economy Centers Around Coffee

BRAZIL'S problem has been the problem of a one-crop country. Coffee is not the only crop which Brazil can grow, nor the only one which she exports, but the others are so greatly overshadowed by coffee that it is not too much to say the the economic sun of that Latin-American republic rises and sets by the price of coffee.

The United States takes a very considerable percentage of Brazil's coffee exports. We do not take all. For Brazil to function effectively as an economic entity she must either find additional markets for her coffee or develop and find markets for other products. To some extent she has succeeded in doing both. But the effort has not been sufficiently successful to help Brazil out of her difficulties.

BRAZIL'S plight was Germany's opportunity. Some time ago the Berlin government made a deal with Rio whereby Germany agreed to take a very considerable quantity of Brazilian coffee, cotton and other products. Germany has no foreign exchange to spare. She could not pay for purchases from Brazil in dollars or pounds. Nor did she offer to do so. What she did offer was to barter Brazilian products for German products.

This arrangement was satisfactory to Brazilian coffee growers and cotton planters. They were reimbursed for their sales by payments from the Bank of Brazil in Brizilian exchange. But the Brazilian government found that the system was bad.

In the first place, Germany took the coffee she had bought in Brazil and sold it, or at least part of it, in other parts of Europe, thus destroying normal Brazilian markets for the product. Secondly, Brazil found herself forced to take more German goods, in payment for the coffee and cotton sold, than her own market could comfortably absorb.

Last July, therefore, the Bank of Brazil completely stopped the purchase of German clearing marks. In retaliation, Germany announced the complete suspension of purchases from Brazil.

THE MOVE had a double purpose. In the first place, it was intended to prove to the Brazilian government that Germany was in a position to strike a serious blow to Brazilian trade. Secondly, it was the latest of a series of warnings to the Rio government that Germany was in a position to make it hot for President Vargas politically. Economically Brazil is very vulnerable to outside pressure. Nor can Brazil be said to be invulnerable to physical attack by a powerful overseas power. But the prime danger to her independence lies in the possibility of a combination of external pressure plus internal confusion fostered by outside agencies.

U. S. Interested In Keeping Axis Out

OBVIOUSLY it would not be to the interest of the United States if the largest Latin-American nation directly or indirectly succumbed to the pressure of the Third Reich and became a satellite of the Berlin-Rome axis. But the first essential step in bolstering up Brazil's independence must inevitably be to free of the necessity of depending on Germany to any serious degree.

Of course, there is no particular reason why Brazil should not trade with Germany or with any other nation. The United States cannot and may never be able to absorb Brazil's surplus of coffee and we don't want any of her cotton. But it is one thing for Brazil to trade with the Third Reich in normal fashion. It is quite another if that trade is conducted along such lines as to make it possible for the Third Reich to hold the whip hand over Brazil by being able to threaten the complete severance of trade relations unless Brazil capitulates to Berlin's terms, be they economic or political.

THE ACCORD with the United States by enabling Brazil to free her exchange, improve her internal credit facilities and buy and sell wherever she wants to, thus has a political as well as an economic significance of great importance.

For Brazil it means that she no longer has to make barter arrangements with Germany except on her own terms. For the United States it means that with our assistance, the Brazilian market will be built up and Brazilian resources developed and the Brazilian market built up. The accord also reduces the danger that Brazil might become the object of Nazi aggression.

Barkley's Labor Rider Blocks Conference Action on Defense

Defense

State Welles conferred with Claude G. Bowers, American Ambassador to loyalist Spain, and unsubstantiated reports were heard that the Spanish insurgent government is considering asking the United States to return Puerto Rico, ceded by Spain after the War of 1898. While neither Welles nor Bowers would comment, it was believed the latter will not return to Spain, leaving the way for his successor to negotiate with the Franco government as to United States recognition of his regime.

Congressional proposals for a constitutional amendment requiring that a popular referendum be taken before the United States could wage a foreign war were debated at a meeting of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee. Chairman Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, declared during the discussion that "unfortunately" the American people were entertaining the opinion that Congress could be stampeded into declaring war and that this right should rest in the voters.

Approves Coast Defenses

Following revelations that Brazil was withholding payments on American goods because of her warship contracts in England, Senator Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said he would ask Congress to authorize Latin-American nations to build naval vessels in United States Government yards.

The House Naval Affairs Committee gave unanimous approval to a $38,524,000 bill to expand naval coast facilities principally in Hawaii, Panama, and the West Coast. The group also reported two measures already passed by the Senate, authorizing the modernization of three large submarines at a cost of $5,000,000, and the purchase and conversion of commercial oil tankers.

Acting Secretary of the Navy Edison asked Congress to permit the Navy to acquire two Grace Line ships and convert them for use as naval auxiliaries. One of the ships, it was said, would be used to prepare and service the 12 new naval air bases which are now before Congress for authorization.

The Treasury Department proposed legislation to increase the officer strength of the Coast Guard by 25 per cent, stressing the functions of the service as a defense unit in time of war. The measure would give the Coast Guard three rear admirals in place of one at present.

"Flooded" by Telegrams

Plans for the immediate training of all Army fliers in war combat tactics were revealed by the War Department in announcing a revision of courses at the Air Corps School at Maxwell Field, Ala.

Senator Logan (Democrat) of Kentucky, said after the defense bill conference that the group had been "flooded" by telegrams indorsing the Barkley amendment, while the National Manufacturers' Association and individual companies had lodged "terrific" protests against it.

Little attention has been devoted yet to the Tobey amendment, another Senate addition which is expected to cause trouble. It would limit aircraft manufacturers to 10 per cent profit on Army contracts. Secretary Woodring was referring to it as well as the Barkley proviso in his statement that the Senate amendments would block the whole defense plan.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

Thighs Are Kept Lovely Only by Dint of Exercise

IF YOU are the average woman you do not figure skate, you are not a chorine, and you do not have shapely thighs . . . and you won't care until the bathing suit season

But only the other day the city fathers of one popular summer but currently windlashed resort looked ahead and passed an ordinance decreeing knee-length suits. If you intend to wear one of the brief lovely nothings decreed by fashion and sanctioned at most beaches, you had better follow their foresighted example and take action now.

Unless you are an athlete or professional dancer, you only use the muscles underlying the front portion of the thighs, which are contracted in standing, in the forward swing of the legs, and in rising from a sittting position. You do little if any side-to-side leg swinging.

Hollows Look Bad

If you are too thin and have poor musculature the hollows along the inner thighs will give your legs a knock-kneed appearance. And if you are a bit overweight, a roll will show up on the outer thigh, below the hem of your suit. You don't want to cut a poor figure, do you? Then begin now to do the exercises that will help you to be a bathing beauty!

Simply swinging the legs from side to side is one of the most effective exercises you can do for the thighs, but you should try to swing the legs at the same distance from the floor. Here is a trick that will help you do this: Place one wastebasket on top of another, and swing alternate legs across the baskets. Begin with five swings for each leg and gradually increase.

Then go into a dance step—you've seen the chorus girls do it hundreds of times, and it is the explanation of their lovely legs. Fling the arms out to one side and kick in the same direction. Then fling the arms to the other side, and kick with that leg. Get some action out of those usually neglected thigh muscles!

10 Minutes a Day

To minimize a swayback along with your thigh molding, lie on the back on the floor, feet together and tucked up near the hips. Keep the feet together on the floor and try to raise the last vertebra just off the floor as you dig down with the small of the back and push the knees apart as far as you can get them. Relax, rest, and repeat.

While on the back on the floor try this more strenuous thigh molder: Bring the legs up close to chest, stretch them apart and down in wide circles, then bring them together and back up the chest with a flexing movement.

Those exercises will not take more than 10 minutes a day, but they will put the finishing touch on your figure program.

Parents Can Help Child Obtain Head Start in School

If you handle your child well the first six years, he has a tremendous head start in school on the youngster whose parents don't take their responsibilities seriously. That is the advice offered by a school principal, writing in the current Coronet Magazine. If you disregard this advice it may take a dozen years of school training partially to offset the traits you've allowed to develop, insists the article, which names parents the best teachers of their children. Five specific suggestions are made:

Teach your children discipline. If you do not know how to manage John or Susan very well, chances are that your children have learned how to manage you.

Teach your children the meaning of work. By giving your child some simple chore to perform regularly, such as emptying waste baskets, drying dishes or mowing lawns, you will give him an opportunity to learn that lesson which has helped many a man and woman achieve full success: Work comes before play.

Give your children some educational material at home. With a little encouragement, children will learn the things you want them to learn. Without any encouragement, they will learn the others!

Take some time daily to play or work with your children. It will bolster their sense of importance. It will make them feel they are needed. And these are the two primary human needs, according to some psychologists.

Help your children learn the value of money. You can do this by devising work in the home in return for the weekly allowance.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl's Faithful Beau Habitually Flirts With Strange Women; Is This to Be Tolerated?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: May I have your honest views on this problem—since it is important to me and probably to many others? I have been dating a young man rather steadily for several years, and while he is very much above the average in intelligence, personality and appearance (slightly egotistical, too), it is quite apparent—and he freely admits—that he is flirtatious by nature and fully enjoys episodes of this type.

I contend that a gentleman should not indulge his fancies when in the company of another girl, and I dislike his attitude exceedingly. He doesn't often deliberately provoke such proceedings, but if a not-unattractive girl begins it, he responds in kind; on the street, in the theater, or wherever we happen to be. I believe him utterly when he tells me it doesn't amount to anything and never will, but I do feel humiliated at the time.

I suppose I am supersensitive, but these things just about ruin an evening for me. On the other hand, he admits that if I were to follow suit and flirt while in his company, he probably would get up and leave me. He has no fear, however. I don't happen to be the flirtatious type. I know he cares about me, because he has no desire to be with other girls, and we have discussed our feelings about each other. But the situation hurts and infuriates me so much at times that I am tempted to break off the whole thing, much as I think of him. Am I right, or is he?

PATRICIA.

Unpardonable Misbehavior

DEAR PATRICIA: In my opinion, your objections to the type of conduct described are entirely justified. Any man is being unpardonably oafish in ogling perfectly strange women encountered in public places. It is trying enough that one's beau should pay rather conspicuously gallant attentions to women of his acquaintance, met when he is squiring one's self.

However, one might condone the latter brand of angling as the exasperating weakness of an excessively vain man; a weakness about which the less said the better, and to which one might just as well adjust one's self, if the man is companionable in other ways and trustworthy in spite of his chanticleer struttings. But the rock bottom fact is this—a beautifully mannered man, sensitive to the dictates of acceptable courtesy; a man who is a gentleman, either by instinct or by training, never behaves in the fashion which you herewith rightfully lament. M. H.

Between Two Fires

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 25 years old and have been married six years to the most generous, thoughtful and kindly man in the world. We have a 5-year-old son and you would think I should be a very happy woman, but this is my problem: I married this man without loving him, to escape an unhappy home. I knew what a wonderful person he was and that he loved me very much.

I thought that having someone who put me first in everything would make me very happy, and I have been happy, in a way. But he is very affectionate and his attentions make me want to scream. Although I have a very romantic nature, I have never been able to enjoy his love-making. To make matters worse, I have fallen in love with another man. I can think of nothing but him. Everywhere I go, he manages to be there. He begs me to find happiness with him and I want to, very much. I hate to think that my life may go by and I will never have known what real love means.

Still, I feel like a rotten cheat, stepping out on a man as fine as my husband. Should I go on with this man and find what I've always wanted? Or just go on dreaming and denying myself, letting life slip by without knowing the real thing? Sincerely,

TORMENTED.

The Bone in the Stream

DEAR TORMENTED: It is my conviction that you would come a lot closer to losing real love out of your life, to missing those experiences which make for greatest consolation, in going off with this man in a wild goose chase after sensual adventure, than you would in remaining with your genuinely devoted husband, who can be counted on to consider your welfare, and that of your child, before his own.

With all due respect for that particular aspect of emotional experience which you believe yourself to be missing—and which no doubt visits incomparable happiness upon the chosen few couples who are privileged to know it, honorably—I am sure that the history of marriage, if unfurled for all to read, would reveal that the majority of wives had managed to lead quite satisfactory lives that did not include a reciprocal grande passion.

There is a modern tendency, in some quarters, to emphasize out of all proportion to its social worth, the supposed indispensable value of a continual fever-temperature passional relationship between married couples. As well argue that marriage, without it, is intolerable, as argue that life isn't worth living because all of us haven't been presented with a million dollars on our respective twenty-first birthdays.

Most of us have to order our individual existences within very small budgetary limits, psychically and emotionally, as well as materially; and we are simply throwing ourselves for an irretrievable loss if we elect to despise that which we have, merely because it happens not to tally with what we may think we would have preferred. In your case and in all comparable cases, the greatest wisdom, the largest personal profit, will be found in hewing to the course to which one is already committed; in making the most of every day's myriad opportunities for individual growth; and in waiting for life itself to open up honorable passageways leading to richer possibilities of happiness than may be one's portion in the immediate present. It is a serious mistake, always, to grab greedily at plums that are distinctly marked "Forbidden."

The essence of folk wisdom is to be found in many of the old fables. And in this instance I am reminded of the story of the dog who, tantalized by the luscious reflection in the stream, of the bone in his mouth, grabbed at same and came up missing on both scores. It appears to me that in seeking to identify yourself with your would-be lover, you would inevitably lose both husband and child, and, most likely, that lover himself, at a not much later date. Men who make love to other men's wives are the most undependable of leaning posts. M H.

Charity Ball

Mrs. Bellwether—Ladies, I feel that it is time we made out the ticket list for our annual benefit ball.

Mrs. Van Tinsel—I don't see how we can do anything now. Everybody's in Florida.

Mrs. Ermine—This town is completely dead.

Mrs. Gilderlyly—It's positively depressing. You might just as well be in a mausoleum.

Mrs. Bellwether—Well, people will begin to come back in a week or so—and, of course, there are really some very good people who remained in town.

Mrs. Hardpann—I never go to Florida any more. It's getting too promiscuous down there.

Mrs. Greatheart — Yes, you never know who you are going to be rubbing up against, even in the best hotels.

Mrs. Van Tinsel—Say, do you think we ought to have this ball in Lent?

Mrs. Greatheart—Oh, but this is a CHARITY ball.

Mrs. Ermine—Lent's just the time for it. People won't have anywhere else to go.

Mrs. Bellwether—Now, about the patronesses——

Mrs. Van Tinsel—How much will the patronesses have to pay?

Mrs. Bellwether—They won't HAVE to pay anything. Of course, it is generally understood that they will take the $100 box seats—and they'll have their names on the programs . . . and in the newspapers.

Mrs. Ermine—It's not the patronesses that are the problem. It's the ordinary—I mean the people who buy the $10 tickets.

Mrs. Bellwether—Yes, they are the ones we want to reach. There were too many tickets returned last year.

Mrs. Greatheart—The thing is—we've got to touch these people's hearts, make them realize the need of these starving children, these helpless old people.

Mrs. Van Tinsel—It's singular how selfish so many people are. Now it certainly looks to me as if anybody could spare $20 for a pair of tickets——

Mrs. Hardpann—Yes, and when you think what they'll get for it—the music and the refreshments——

Mrs. Bellwether—And the contacts. Don't forget the contacts!

Mrs. Gilderlyly—Don't you think if we sent more tickets out this year——

Mrs. Bellwether—No! No indeed! We've got to keep this thing exclusive.

Mrs. Stalactite—No. I don't think just ANYBODY should be permitted to buy tickets.

Mrs. Ermine—There's the tradition to maintain.

Mrs. Gilderlyly—I was just thinking of some of these new people like Mrs. Montgomery Clymer. I know she'd buy a lot of tickets.

Mrs. Greatheart—I don't think she's the type we want identified with this enterprise.

Mrs. Van Tinsel—Well I know Mrs. Bert Dasher would put out a lot of money for tickets.

Mrs. Bellwether—We-ell I don't know. You see the thing is she would expect to come to my Halloween dance and I just don't quite see . . .

Mrs. Stalactite—It's most important that the right people come to this benefit.

Mrs. Gilderlyly—Well the only thing is, our institution needs money so badly and I'm afraid we won't sell enough tickets.

Mrs. Greatheart—We must simply try to touch the hearts of all these people—that is the ones on our list.

Mrs. Hardpann—By the way, Mrs. MacSquatter told me the other day she wanted to buy half a dozen tickets this year.

Mrs. Ermine—She sent hers back last year.

Mrs. Bellwether—Yes and she's on my black—I mean . . . well she didn't come to my Halloween party.

Mrs. Gilderlyly—I still think we ought to extend the ticket list. When you think of all those needy children——

Mrs. Bellwether—Yes, but if the ticket list gets too promiscuous we simply can't take care of these people at our personal parties.

Mrs. Stalactite—Say, how would this do? Now I'm perfectly willing to open my garden to a large party. It's fairly simple to take care of a large group in a garden and we might let it be quietly understood that all purchasers of tickets would be—well, included on my guest list.

Mrs. Bellwether—That's a fine idea!

Mrs. Ermine—It just takes care of everything.

Mrs. Greatheart—Yes, and it will enable us to interest a great many more people in our institution.

Mary Anita Loos Is Collecting Most of City's Stares and Beaux

New York, March 10.

THERE'S ALWAYS one girl in town who seems to collect most of the stares and beaux, and I don't mean the cunning little trinkets of "cafe society," either. Such a young girl is now filling the local scene, and I sat at the same table with her at a big benefit recently held at the Casa Manana.

The current wow's name is Mary Anita Loos. She is a niece of that veteran screen writer, Anita Loos, who wrote "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," a work of culture which sent thousands of American girls on the gallop to the beauty shoppeys. This Mary Anita is certainly good to look at. She wears eye-filling clothes and she sports one of the longest bobs in town; on occasion she wears a gleaming golden disc right in the center of her forehead. This last maneuver certainly does not cause the girl to be ignored.

Mary Anita never runs out of boy friends. Probably her pet escort is the handsome bandleader, Eddy Duchin, and that invincible night-lifer, the Cartoonist Peter Arno, is one of her favorite dancing partners. Although she came here from California only last fall, the Loos lass is now a prominent figure whenever something special is going on after nightfall.

That cute little redhead, the enfant terrible of dress designers, Gladys Parker is in the gazettes again. Now she has had her toe nails painted black—mostly to help publicize the fashion show of the Young American Artist's Association. That Gladys is as cute a trick as there is in town.

Round of Parties Here Renews Many Friendships of Durbrows

Former Emily Maitland Moore and Husband Staying With Her Mother; Party Of Loy Henderson Honors Them

MR AND MRS. ELBRIDGE DURBROW, of whom Washington has seen comparatively little since their marriage in London last summer, are spending a few days in the Capital renewing friendships and being feted at a gay round of parties.

Mrs. Durbrow, it will be recalled, is the former Miss Emily Maitland Moore, daughter of Mrs. Meade Boore, with whom she and her husband are stopping. A close friend of Miss Emlen Davies, she met her husband when she and Miss Davies were visiting the latter's father, Joseph Davies, in Moscow, where he served as Ambassador until a year or so ago. Mr. Durbrow was at that time attached to the United States Embassy there.

Since that time, several of their friends who were then stationed in the Soviet capital have been transferred back to Washington, and all are enjoying a reunion. Loy Henderson, who served as Charge d'Affaires of our embassy in Moscow, is now attached to the State Department, and yesterday afternoon he and Mrs. Henderson entertained at a small cocktail party in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Durbrow. Mr. Henderson was also best man at Mr. Darbrow's wedding.

Several From Moscow At Henderson Party

Those present were mostly friends from Moscow days, and included Mr. and Mrs. Edward Page—Mr. Page was attached to our embassy there, and now, like Mr. Henderson, is with the State Department—and Dr. and Mrs. Adolf Rumreich. The Health Service stations American doctors in Moscow for the benefit of the members of the embassy and other American officials there, and it was in this capacity that Dr. Rumreich went to the Soviet. He has since been ordered back to Washington.

The pretty hostess yesterday wore a frock of Eleanor blue as she received in the drawing room of their home, 2308 California street. Mrs. Page and Mrs. Rumreich assisted during the afternoon. Later Mr. and Mrs. Page gave a small dinner in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Durbrow.

Both the visitors will attend the tea which Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings will give tomorrow afternoon in honor of the latter's sister, Miss Emlen Knight Davies. She and her mother, Mrs. Knight Davies, have come from New York, where they have been living this winter, to spend the week-end with Senator and Mrs. Tydings in their apartment at the Shoreham.

The wedding of Miss Davies to Robert Leon Grosjean of Brussels will take place late in May at "Oakington," the Tydings country estate near Havre de Grace, Md. Miss Davies was in Mrs. Durbrow's wedding last summer, and wants her friend to be in hers, but since Mrs. Durbrow will sail on Friday on the Conte de Savoia for Europe with her husband, she is doubtful whether she can return in time. However, it is definite that Mrs. Tydings and another sister, Mrs. Aldace Walker, of New York, the former Miss Rahel Davies, will be among Miss Davies' attendants at her wedding, which will be one of the most important events of the spring season.

Miss Chantry To Fete Visitors

Mr. and Mrs. Durbrow will be joined today by Robert Cass, of Cleveland, Ohio, a close friend of the former's. He will spend the week-end with them at Mrs. Moore's apartment and will attend the small supper party that Mr. and Mrs. Durbrow will give this evening.

Carolyn Chantry, who knew Mrs. Durbrow when both were students at Vassar, has issued cards to a tea in honor of the visitors on Monday from 5 to 7 at the home of her parents, Capt. and Mrs. Alan Chantry, 1528 Twenty-second street.

After her marriage last summer, Mrs. Durbrow returned to this country to finish studying for her degree at Vassar, where she and Miss Davies were classmates. The winter in the Soviet interrupted their work there. Mr. Durbrow is at present United States Consul at Naples, and is now on leave from his post.

Mrs. Chapin Bows at Court

Of the American women who were presented to King George VI and Queen Elizabeth at the first royal court of the season on Thursday at Buckingham Palace, one of the most interesting to Washington society is Mrs. Vinton Chapin. Mr. Chapin, now Second Secretary of the London Embassy, was on duty at the State Department for several years before his transfer to Europe. Their marriage took place abroad.

In accordance with Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy's policy restricting American presentees to families of American officials or residents in Great Britain, only a small group from the United States made their bows. They were Mrs. Samuel A. Greenwell, wife of Maj. Greenwell, assistant United States Military Attache in London; Miss Barbara Mead, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Mead, of Old Greenwich, Conn., and Miss Alfreda Huntington, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Constant D. Huntington, of Hadley, Mass.

By Elizabeth Henney.

It was Navy Day at Fort Myer yesterday, and from lunch time on through tea the Army post did honor to over 700 Navy officers and their wives. With a 17-gun salute, Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, was welcomed at the post at noon. He and Mrs. Leahy were luncheon guests of Col. George S. Patton, jr., fort commandant, and Mrs. Patton.

Following the luncheon, one of the most spectacular drills of the season took place in the riding hall. Through a haze of flying tanbark, the huge crowd saw cowboy riders, acrobatic rides with the riders dressed as sailors, and events where the horsemen jumped their mounts through flaming hoops. All afternoon the post band played Navy songs. Following the drill, the guests were invited to a tea dance at the Post Hop Room. Retreat had sounded, and the sun was setting behind the Virginia hills, long before the guests departed.

House Foes Fail to Snag 'Split' Plan

Effort to Recommit Md. Conservation Bill Fails; Steamroller Action is Charged

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., March 10.—Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor's revamped conservation program survived its first test in the House after a bitter three-hour battle today.

Opposition efforts to recommit the favorable Chesapeake Bay and tributaries committee report on H. B. 480, the marine fisheries half of the Governor's "split commission" plan, failed by a 35-79 margin.

The Senate earlier had approved a favorable report on the proposal by a 28 to 1 vote.

Charges of lying and "gag rule" punctuated the long debate. John S. White (Democrat), Prince George's, demanded a vote on a plea of strict allegiance to the Governor.

Asks Confidence Vote

"A vote against the bill is a slap in the face for O'Conor," White shouted in the course of his plea, during which he declared that "vilification and calumny" by a Baltimore newspaper had demeaned and humiliated the Governor. White said the attacks of the newspaper made necessary a vote of confidence by "all good Democrats."

Opponents of the measure pleaded that action on the administration measure be delayed to permit a hearing, and said interested conservationists and wild life experts wished to appear in opposition to the measure.

John Clark (Democrat), of Harford, cosponsor of a conservation bill which retains the chief features of the measure scuttled by the Governor when he switched to the "split commission" plan, inferred he had been "double-crossed" by the precipitate action of the Chesapeake Bay committee in reporting the measure.

Clark said the Governor's bill was drawn by jobseekers and selfish watermen, and that it violated O'Conor's campaign pledge to "take conservation out of politics."

Rush Tactics Assailed

He declared that the hasty action on the Governor's measure was "greasing the skids" to railroad the measure through to passage to satisfy political blocs on the Eastern Shore.

Albert Sklar (Democrat), of Baltimore, took the floor to declare that it was the inherent right of any citizen in a democracy to be allowed a hearing on any legislation. The tactics of the Governor's supporters in speeding the bill through without hearing and without consideration, Sklar said, smacked of dictatorship.

Today's legislative routine, otherwise, included the following:

Four Corners Fire Tax Area Change Asked

Montgomery Delegation To Assembly Holds Hearing in Annapolis

The Montgomery County delegation in the Maryland Legislature yesterday held a public hearing in Annapolis on the proposed transfer of property near Four Corners, Md., to the Silver Spring fire tax area.

A measure to authorize transfer of the region, now in the Kensington fire tax area, has been prepared by Delegate Joseph Buscher and has the support of civic organizations in Silver Spring.

The county delegation, however, is still uncommitted.

Austensen Testifies

Testifying for the proposed change were Berry E. Clark, of the Four Corners Citizens Association; Phillip J. Austensen, of the East Sligo Valley Citizens Association and the Allied Civic Groups of the Silver Spring area; Fred L. Lutes and William F. Carlin, of the Silver Spring Business Men's Association, and members of the Silver Spring Fire Department.

Although declaring the transfer should be made, Lawrence Smoot, leader of a Kensington delegation, said the budget of Kensington had been made up with receipts from the expected fire taxes of the region included.

Ask Other Transfers

The Kensington delegation asked that tax areas now in Bethesda and Chevy Chase be transferred to Kensington if the pending proposal is carried out.

Hiram Musgrove, president of the County Firemen's Association, urged that the question be held in abeyance until the next session of the Legislature to permit his organization to relocate boundaries of the fire tax areas in question.

Mrs. Doyle Praises Classes For Children With Poor Vision

Says Teaching Places Emphasis on Training for Normal Living; Ruhland Lauds Blindness Prevention Work

Sight conservation classes in District schools are permitting many children with defective vision to receive education and to make adjustments needed if they are to lead useful lives, Mrs. Hnry Gratton Doyle, president of the Board of Education, said last night at the third anniversary meeting of the District Society for the Prevention of Blindness.

"The emphasis constantly is placed on the preparation of children with defective vision for normal living," she declared, adding that "the fact that children after attending the sight conservaion classes are able o keep up in school work is evidence that the training is fulfilling its purpose."

Mrs. Doyle said she had been informed that $195 is needed for the purchase of large type with which to print books for use of children with less than average vision and stressed importance of special equipment and supplies adapted to needs of pupils with poor sight.

Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, praised efforts of the society and pointed out that "it is frfom such private organizations that beneficial public services are born."

"The entire Public Health Service," he said, "owes its existence to private agencies which urged the government to assume, at least, the social aspects of the health problems of the Nation."

Mrs. William H. Wilmer, wife of the late Dr. Wilmer, founder of the society, presided.

Virginia Plans $65,000 Exhibit At World's Fair

Richmond, Va., March 10 (AP).—With a threatening financial problem apparently solved, the Virginia New York World's Fair Commission went ahead today with its plans to set up a "creditable" State exhibit at the New York Exposition.

Gov. Price indicated yesterday he would give written approval for the commission to exceed its $35,000 appropriation by another $30,000. He said plans were too far advanced to withdraw now, and that he hoped the exhibit would be presented in creditable fashion.

The commission named R. M. Sanford, of the State Planning Board, assistant secretary. Acting as an executive officer, Sanford may enable the group to save a $250 monthly expense, it was pointed out. This item had been tentatively set in the budget for a director.

Traffic Engineer Asked

Richmond, Va., March 10 (AP).—Safety Director John A. Cutchins, in his annual report made public today, recommended large increases in the city police personnel and the employment of a full-time traffic engineer.

American Doctors Jailed by Nazis Lose on Appeal

Dr. Oscar Lavine, 32, of Mount Rainier, Md., and Dr. Michael George Albert, 32, of New York, have lost appeals against prison sentences and fines imposed on them December 6 when they were convicted of violating Germany's foreign exchange laws, Associated Press reported from Vienna yesterday.

Lavine, a graduate of George Washington University who practiced in Mount Rainier before leaving last December to study at a Vienna hospital, received a six months sentence and $24,000 fine. He is free on a $10,000 bail but unable to leave Vienna. Fined a similar sum, Albert is serving a one year penitentiary sentence. He was also studying advanced medicine in Vienna.

Members of his family here have made several attempts to gain Dr. Lavine's release and one sister, Ann, went to Vienna. Exact nature of the charges never were officially revealed.

Lorton Needs Gymnasium, Says Official

Lack of Recreational Facilities in Winter Revealed by Welsh

Need for additional recreation facilities to raise prison morale at Lorton Reformatory was disclosed by Edward J. Welsh, deputy superintendent, at forum at the Socal Work School of Catholic University last night.

Stating that prisoners are given sufficient opportunity for recreation in summer months in outdoor sports at the reformatory, Welsh declared adequate exercise facilities are lacking in winter.

Gymnasium Needed

A gymnasium for winter sports would fill the gap, he said.

Welsh declared no trouble is anticipated at Lorton because of overcrowding although 1,650 prisoners are housed in accommodations designed for 1,500. Uprisings of prisoners because of poor food such as occurred in 1934, are not now likely because of improvement in prison fare, he added.

Prisoners Kept Busy

Main means of "control" of prisoners at Lorton beside adequate food are the industrial and educational programs, Welsh declared.

Products of the prison print shop, foundry, knitting mill, brick kiln, and broom and mattress factory, supply prison needs and are sold to other District institutions with an average return of $220,000 annually.

O'Conor Blasts Critics, Defends 'Split' Conservation Boards

No One Can Dictate to Me, Md. Governor Asserts in 'Fireside Chat;' Seafood Bill Declared Compromise Plan

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., March 10.—Published criticism of Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor's compromise conservation plan brought from the executive tonight a broadcast retort that "I will not permit anyone to dictate to me, whether it be politicians, organizations, or newspapers."

In a radio address over a Statewide hook-up delivered only a few hours after the Legislature advanced his conservation program within a step of enactment into law, the Governor took his ideas on the subject direct to the people, with the assertion:

"In this matter of conservation which has been so unfairly publicized, I have not yielded to the pressure or importunities of either politicians or newspapers and the program which I have outlined represents my honest and sincere judgment of what is in the interest of the State and for the good of its people."

The first portion of the "fireside chat" and the last were devoted largely to an expression of the Governor's "resentment" at what he said were the "distorted presentations" of his conservation program made by a Baltimore newspaper (Evening Sun).

He recalled that, acting on the recommendations of his commission on governmental efficiency and economy, headed by Dr. Isaiah H. Bowman, president of the Johns Hopkins University, he had submitted to the Legislature early in the session a plan to revise the conservation commission set-up.

"It soon became apparent to me and to the leaders and members of the two legislative branches that it would be impossible to secure the passage of a bill embodying all of the recommendations of the Bowman commission," he continued.

"Knowing from experience how attempts to put through constructive conservation in past legislatures had bogged down because of opposition from one group or another, I came to the conclusion that to save the whole idea of conservation for this session, it was necessary to forsake this highly desirable measure, which had little chance for passage, and to substitute a measure that would embody the essentials of the discarded bill, but that would eliminate such features as would likely prevent its passage."

Therefore, he said, he had called into consultation many persons familiar with the conservation problems and also had "conferred with officials of the United States Bureau of Fisheries and others having scientific knowledge of the problem."

The compromise plan which he sent to the Legislature March 6 divorcing tide water fisheries and oyster control from upland game and sports fishing, was the result of these conferences, he continued.

His plan of "split" commissions, Gov. O'Conor said, is "in keeping with action in many other States in dealing with their conservation problems."

He cited as examples the setup in Maine, Connecticut, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Virginia and South Carolina.

"Even the Federal Government's conservation activities are separated. Fisheries are under the Department of Commerce. Game and wild life are under the Department of Agriculture, national parks are under the Department of Interior. Yet the work of these agencies is none the less effective by reason of the separation and where their activities overlap there is close co-operation."

Capital News In Brief

Grouse Court by Dancing

Lady grouse are courted by gentlemen grouse at big indoor dances, Alfred M. Bailey, Colorado Museum of National History, director, told the National Geographic Society last night. He lectured on "Wild Life in the Chromatic West."

Bailey showed the first color pictures of the American golden eagle and its young and films of theg reat white pelican, one of America's largest birds, made on Gunnison Island in Salt Lake.

These birds, he said, live on fresh water fish and must fly at least 50 miles round trip to their feeding grounds and bring back fish for their young. Motion pictures of scenes in the national parks of the West also were shown.

2% Sales Tax Plan Is Given Md. Assembly

$10,000,000-a-Year Revenue Estimated; Would Be Substitute For Income Tax Bill

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, March 10.—A general 2 per cent sales tax, estimated to raise $10,000,000 annually, was laid before Maryland legislators today as a substitute for Gov. O'Conor's classified income tax proposal.

Ten members of the House of Delegates dropped the measure in the hoppers and it was referred immediately to the ways and means committee.

As the measure was introduced its sponsors joined in a declaration that "it is the fairest tax because most of us spend in proportion to what we have. In accordance with our ability to pay, it is even more equitable than the income tax."

Vital Foods Exempt

They said it would not work a hardship on low-income families because the proposal they advanced would exempt fresh milk, meat, sugar, potatoes and bread.

Gasoline also was exempt on grounds it already is heavily taxed. Electric light, gas and water bills also would be excluded from the levy.

But virtually every other sales transaction in Maryland would be subject to the 2 per cent under the bill's provisions, including meals and drink at restaurants, bars, hotels, drug stores and clubs.

If the measure is passed, the tax would become effective next June 1.

Penalties Provided

Besides imposing interest penalties for failure of delinquency in filing returns or paying the tax, retailers would be subject to $1,000 fine and a year in prison, or both, for failure to file returns, keep records and make tax payments.

Those introducing the bill included F. H. Houck (Democrat), Baltimore County; C. S. Houck (Democrat), Frederick; Jonothan Sleeman (Republican), Allegany; Miss Elizabeth Doub (Republican), Allegany; Charles F. Argabright (Democrat), Fifth, Baltimore; William J. Foley (Democrat), Baltimore County; William H. Lloyd (Republican), Dorchester; Darwin B. Martin (Republican), Garrett and J. Milton Dick, of Allegany County, Republican floor leader.

Nurse Brown, at 74, Has Helped Life Begin a Thousand Times

Has Been One of Stork's Most Dependable Assistants for Nearly 40 Years; Lost One Infant and One Mother

[This series is about men and women 70 or older who are finding that so-called "old-age" is really a lot of fun. They still are producing and getting a big thrill out of their work or hobbies. You know some qualifiers. Tell us who they are.—Editor's note.]

By Gerald G. Gross.

MRS. LUCINDA BROWN

Thanks are hereby extended to the bird that whispered into this department's ear that Mrs. Lucinda Brown is in town. It was a stork.

Woman and girl, Mrs. Brown has been one of the stork's most dependable assistants for nigh on to 40 years now and today, at the age of 74, she is still delivering babies in sparsely settled Nevada communities where no doctor is within reach.

She was working on a quilt in the living room of her daughter's home at 236 Jefferson street northwest when the visitor, who had been tipped off by the bird, arrived. The son-in-law and daughter whom she is visiting are Dr. and Mrs. Clarence Cottam.

Mrs. Brown was inclined to make little of her record as an obstetrical nurse in remote settlements of Utah and Nevada but her daughter and granddaughter, by persistent urging, made her come clean and tell that:

She has brought more than 1,000 babies into the world with the loss of only one infant and one mother.

She attended the birth, either as midwife or doctor's assistant, of 15 of her grandchildren and two of her great-grandchildren.

She has gone out in snowstorms, forded streams and faced every adversity imaginable in the pursuit of her nursing.

As a small child in Kanab, Utah, she was a member of a group of pioneer settlers who were in constant peril from belligerent Navajos. Fortunately, however, that source of trouble had disappeared by the time she embarked upon her career, after having studied nursing and obstetrics in Salt Lake City

She now makes her home in Alamo, Nev., which, having a population of 200 or so, is practically a metropolis in that thinly inhabited State. Failing health in the last few years has forced her to keep her nursing work to a minimum, still she delivered two babies just before coming to Washington.

"I'm just about retired now," she says.

But her daughter, Mrs. Cottam, comes right back and says she'll risk a dime that her mother will begin accepting calls all over again as soon as she is back home in Alamo.

Capitol Offers An Engrossing Mystery Film

"FAST AND LOOSE," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of an original screen play by Harry Kurnitz, co-starring Robert Montgomery and Rosalind Russell with Reginald Owen, Ralph Morgan, Etienne Girardot, Alan Dinehart, Jo Ann Sayers, Joan Marsh, Anthony Allan, Tom Collins, Sidney Blackmer, Donald Douglas, Ian Wolfe, Mary Forbes and Leonard Carey. Directed by Edwin L. Marin. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Capitol Theater.

When constabulary duty is to be done, a film policeman's lot is not a happy one, for always lurking in the background is one of those smooth and flippant fellows who unravel the most complicated of transgressions with the ease and naivete that make the professional copper look like an all-time clown. Robert Montgomery is the dilettante detective in the new film at the Capitol Theater, "Fast and Loose," and Rosalind Russell his fashionably uninhibited wife.

Nothing quite so mundane nor tawdry as a jewel robbery, or the lusts of the flesh, is the cause of this iron-nerved bibliophile's excursion into the byways of crime, although there is a trio of murders and a motive of money. An original Shakespeare manuscript is the cause of the fracas and it makes for a rarified lesson in smart detection.

In one of those pleasantly haphazard nests in which the connubially linked of the cinema habitually dwell, Montgomery and Miss Russell begin their day by silencing an impatient telephone. Calling is an absent-minded collector who wants dealer Montgomery to buy for him the Nicholas Torrent Shakespeare manuscript, as he has heard the Torrents are dropping fast financially. Being a true book fancier, Montgomery is hurtled from his bed by this cataclysmic news and from then on everything is higgledy-piggledy until a family skeleton is drawn from its closet and cold, clammy bodies in the Torrent mansion are as common as starlings on Pennsylvania avenue.

Much Dashing Abbout

So unceasing is the dashing about and finger-pointing in "Fast and Loose" that it is certainly a film to keep the detective-story fans making bets with themselves. As is customary in these stories of amateur sleuths, the law is always bungling its way into some false clue and part of the jaunty Montgomery's task is to bring the light to those who are supposed to see. Also on the not-to-be-fooled hero's mind, as in all such films these days, is the little woman who just will be alternately calm and astonished at the most awkward moments.

But for the most part, despite a few unfunny lines, Rosalind Russell is such a charming wife, so crisply adult that we, too, want to be a lit'rary detective and come home to have the little wife put her smartly shod tootsies on our knees. Montgomery with his facile ways is well adapted to this role of the part-time sleuth and a familiar cast does well with roles that are pretty much "typed." Reginald Owen, Etienne Girardot, Alan Dinehart and Joan Marsh are prominent in this support.

Boles Stars on Stage

The stage show at the Capitol has several distinct high-lights, definitely above par. Yesterday afternoon's first audience withheld its enthusiasm for the appearance of John Boles, but your reviewer got pretty much elated before his arrival over the smooth low comedy of Herman Hyde and his beauteous blonde partner, Thelma Lee.

You have very likely seen Mr. Hyde and some of his more amazing properties, the details of which you should see for yourself; surely these two are genuinely comical when they never crack their pans, but go seriously about their business.

Gene Ford has devised a striking undersea set for a mermaid ballet by the Rhythm Rockets and it is one of the most impressive we've seen at the big F street house. Norma Gallo, solo dancer, makes it additionally impressive.

Towering and stalwart John Boles has the top spot and the popular screen star pleases his audience highly with songs from "Rio Rita" and "The Desert Song." His best number, in which he himself seemed to get the most pleasure, was "Waiting at the Gate for Katie," a comedy song he introduced in "Bottoms Up" several years ago. The audience wanted more of Mr. Boles than it got, but the show had to go on.

Monroe and Adams Sisters do some neat juggling with the aid of drums and steady rhythm. There is an interesting short on the training of bird dogs and Phil Lampkin leads his men through some of the hit tunes of the day.

RICHARD L. COE.

Columbia

"Trade Winds" is fine and smooth and entertaining, or so it seemed to us. Perhaps it was the fetchingly sultry Hedy La Marr make-up which took Joan Bennett right into the menace class, or it could have been Fredrick March stomping elegantly through his paces as a philandering lover-detective, who always gets his woman. Or Ralph Bellamy swaggering heftily through his stooging role as March's March hare assistant. Or Ann Sothern being brittily and blithely anotner stooge who drops malapropisms with gay abandon.

The plot, defty embellished by some choice and literate wordage from Dorothy Parker and Alan Campbell, is one of those in-constant-motion themes, using shots Director Tay Garnett made with his own little camera on a round-the-world jaunt.

Bellamy and Sothern play out their ludicrous, appealing parts against the backdrop of the March-Bennett romance which has all the inevitable warmth of a trade wind. Happy though the ending be, it travels a strange and fascinating path to its conclusion.

Sparkling with colors seldom seen in Technicolor is the Terrytoon cartoon which has a silly duck who prophesies the sky will fall. You may remember him from nursery rhyme days. A skating short is instructive and conducive to envy, for its principals are a trio of girls from 8 years to 16, which will make the average woman feel like a decrepit and squeaky-jointed grandmother.

'The Oklahoma Kid,' at Earle, Stars Cagney as Honest Desperado

Picture Is Violent Melodrama of Settling Of Cherokee Strip; Barton Is Stage Hit

"THE OKLAHOMA KID." Warner Brothers picturization of an original story by Edward E. Paramore and Wally Klein, adapted to the screen by Warren Duff, Robert Buckner and Mr. Paramore, starrying James Cagney with Rosemary Lane, Humphrey Bogart, Donald Crisp, Harvey Stephens, Hugh Sothern, Charles Middleton, Edward Pawley, Ward Bond, John Miljan, Arthur Aylesworth, Irving Bacon, Joe Devlin and Wade Boteler. Directed by Lloyd Bacon. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Earle Theater.

The spirit of "Two-Gun" Bill Hart seemed to be hovering about the screen in the Earle Theater yesterday when James Cagney shot his way through the turbulent action of "The Oklahoma Kid." In this exciting and handsomely produced story of the opening of the Cherokee Strip to white settlers, Cagney has a role that is identical with those that made William S. Hart "king of the Westerns" some two decades or so ago.

BELL

In its justification of the depradations, robberies, killings and whatnot of a notorious outlaw of the early days in the Southwest, when Tulsa was merely a wide sweep of uninhabited prairie, "The Oklahoma Kid" is of a piece with "Jesse James." The most sinsiter figure in all of the savage goings-on, with a price on his head, in the end, is made a bit of a hero.

It all simmers down to the familiar spectacle of the civilizing effects of the war to bring law and order into a wild country, beset by the predatory enterprises of as fine a band of murderous cuthroats as ever had been encountered on the screen. Son of an honest father and brother of a youthful sheriff, Jim Kincaid, "The Oklahoma Kid," is the black sheep of the family, who finds high exhilaration in holding up an occasional stagecoach, blasting a few of his favorite enemies into eternity and otherwise taking the law, as he sees it, into his own hands.

Jim Gets His Men

When his father is lynched as a means of making things easier for Whip McCord and his gang, "The Kid" really goes to work—with a .45 in each hand. Those .45's bode no good for the renegades the junior Kincaid goes after. One by one, he overhauls them is a desperate effort to escape his retributive wrath. When he finally catches up with Mr. McCord, there is a battle that does everything but tear down the flimsy building in which it is held. If it is action you want, here it is in superabundance.

Balancing these tumultuous intervals of the picture's major movement is a vein of romance that is never overstressed or too saccharine. Rosemary Lane is Mr. Cagney's chief accomplice in these gentler passages of the narrative. Miss Lane turns in an intelligent and restrained portrayal that supplies the only important feminine touch in the entire course of the film.

Jimmy Cagney playes the title role in a spirit of high good nature—paradoxical as that may sound—and offers an effective character delineation that is in striking contrast with the snarling figure he portrayed in his last previous stellar vehicle, "Angels With Dirty Faces." It is a fine change of pace that Cagney reveals here and one that stamps him as an actor who is able to distinguish his performances by an admirable variety of approach and treatment.

Support Knows Its Business

The supporting cast is composed of players who long have been inured to this sort of tempestuous thing. Hard riding, hard shooting, the grim business of the hanging-bee and all of the other stark concomitants of a wild life in a wild country long since have been among the elements of melodrama which such players as Humphrey Bogart, Donald Crisp, Harvey Stephens, Charles Middleton, Ward Bond and other members of the cast named in the small-type paragraph preceding these remarks have had at their finger tips.

John Miljan makes his reappearance on the screen after a long absence in the role of a shyster lawyer, whose legal talents are devoted futilely to the interests of Mr. McCord and his henchmen. We do not see Mr. Miljan killed, along with those he defended, but that would not have been a bad idea!

Executed entirely in sepia tints, "The Oklahoma Kid" is especially notable for the clarity and beauty of its photography. The natural settings in a rugged country lend themselves to fine pictorial display.

Barton Scores Hit

James Barton, fresh from four or five years of Jeeter Lestering in "Tobacco Road," headlines this week's stage bill at the Earle and again scores his inevitable hit in his depiction of the progressively jingled Irishman who visits one saloon after another with his fantastic tale of having been bitten by a mad dog and therefore in great need of a drink. This is one of the stage's masterpieces of cumulative inebriety and finds Mr. Barton at his best. He ends his act with a tap dance that no one but Bill Robinson could approach. Needless to say, he was a tremendous hit yesterday afternoon.

The stage activities are introduced by the Roxyettes in a "Hillbilly" number and then introduce Ted Allen, champion horseshoe pitcher; Gene Sheldon, with his grotesque comedy and expert banjo playing; Carole Manners, with a soprano voice a little too big for the Earle; the Del Rios, sensational balancers and gymnasts, and the Roxyettes twice more in a colorful fan number and a novel routine on ladders.

A new Popeye cartoon comedy, "Customers Wanted," and the Paramount News are the screen subsidiaries of a rip-roaring bill.

Learns Golf

Hedy Lamarr has taken up golf, and on her first tour around the Bel-Air course she had Robert Ritchie, Bruce Cabot and Victor Fleming, the director, as her golfing companions.

'Two-Gun' Bill Hart's Successor

JAMES CAGNEY

as he appears in the title role of the Warner Brothers' production of "The Oklahoma Kid," this week's major screen attraction at the Earle Theater. Mr. Cagney bangs persistently away, to fine effect, with a .45 and is ably supported by Rosemary Lane, Donald Crisp, Humphrey Bogart and a large number of others who know their way around in "Westerns"

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, March 10.

DR. CHARLES SEYMOUR: Three of your students at Yale are wanted for questioning in a murder case. They had been tossed out of a New Haven barroom after a fight. The next day a mysterious fire razed that barroom building and a woman was burned to death . . . John Perona: Frank Shields, the tennis star, who holds cafe society's one-punch kayo record in a fight at your El Morocco, lost his championship in a fight in Fifty-eighth street Sunday night.

WILL HAYS: Jock Whitney is negotiating with Floyd Odlum to purchase part of the R. K. O. stock . . . Walt Disney: Ted Husing will appear in a movie trailer for Max Fleischer's animated cartoon, "Gulliver's Travels." Gary Cooper's voice will be heard in the leading role and the singing will be done by Lanny Ross.

GROVER WHALEN: The Liberian government sent its representatives to Herman Stark, whose Cotton Club productions have been the most consistently successful revues on Broadway . . . They wanted Stark to produce a colored show for the Liberian exhibit at the fair. "We're willing to pay $500 a week for Bill Robinson and $250 for Cab Calloway" . . . Marty Forkins, Robinson's manager, laughed at the suggestion . . . "$750 a week for both Robinson and Calloway?" Stark told the Liberian representatives. "Listen; this is America—where Lincoln freed the slaves."

NEW YORK BAR ASSOCIATION: John Amen, the special prosecutor, will demand the removal of a jurist, alleging that he sat on the bench only six days in one year . . . Harry Richman: George White is bringing suit against you for $6,000. He'll charge that you borrowed that sum from him in 1934 . . . Dramatists' Guild: Mrs. Arthur Schnitzler, widow of the famed Austrian playwright, will arrive in America within a few weeks, to settle here . . . Margaret Mitchell: Dave Selznick has retained only five pages of Sidney Howard's original adaptation of your book, "Gone With the Wind" . . . Fred Astaire: Aren't you returning from Hollywood to do a show for Vinton Freedley?

BRUNSWICK-BALKE: Willie Hoppe, the grand old man of billiards, who has won almost every championship in that field, visited The Whirling Top this week and discussed pocket billiards . . . He described extremely difficult shots wherein the ball always wound up in one of the pockets . . . "What's the toughest shot in this game?" he was asked . . . "I guess," shrugged Hoppe, "the toughest shot in this racket is putting your dough into either side pocket—and making it stay there."

F. D. R.: The first announcements regarding mail order book rentals will appear on Sunday. The ads all will be dedicated to you for making this possible by reducing the postage rates on books . . . Sally Rand: N. T. G. now is signing papers for a show at the World's Fair, not unlike your D'nude Ranch. It will consist of a wild west rodeo with gals . . . Adolf Hitler: So you like American dancing girls? Well, Nancy Healy, who danced for you two years ago has been hired to dance at the Top Hat, across the river here . . . Lew Brown: Haven't you signed Harry Richman and Jack Pearl for your new show?

F. C. C.: Elliot Roosevelt, who criticized your commissioners on Tuesday, came to the Glass Hat last night accompanied by Col. Roscoe Turner, the American speed flyer, and Vera Kramer. When a news photographer approached the table, Roosevelt suddenly left . . . A few minutes later Vera sent Turner to find him and the flyer returned, confessing that he didn't know what had happened to Elliot . . . "On a clear night and in a well-lit room, you can't find the son of the President," Vera criticized the famed aviator. "I'd hate to be in a plane with you, trying to find a landing field!"

AL SMITH: Every place visited by the then Cardinal Pacelli during his trip to America now is getting adidtional publicity. Aren't you sorry now that you wouldn't let camera men photograph his holiness when he visited the Empire State Tower five minutes before his boat sailed? . . . George S. Kaufman: Moss Hart, your collaborator, decided to economize, and that he doesn't need his Waldorf-Astoria suite. So yesterday he rented a four-story house on Sutton place.

LAZARO CARDENAS: Cecilia Villa, daughter of Pancho Villa, came to New York and discovered that another young lady was being advertised as the daughter of Pancho Villa . . . Cecilia went hunting for the other girl—Panchita Villa of the Club Gaucho—intent upon wreaking physical vengeance . . . She finally met Pancho, confronted her and—after a two minute talk the girls became friendly . . . They're now living together in one apartment.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, March 10 (I.N.S.).—You may recall I told you that Barbara Stanwyck was hot for the role of the tramp from Brooklyn in "Golden Boy." Well, the part is hers and the contract was signed today with Harry Cohn and Columbia. The movie starts in three weeks, and I wonder if that may mean that Barbara and Robert Taylor will marry sooner than the middle of April, the original date set for their long anticipated marriage.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Barbara told me that she didn't want to be working when she married and that she and Bob would choose a time when each was free of studio obligations. Poor Harry is still searching for a violin playing pugilist. He fairly snatched Rouben Mamoulian off the train after he started back to New York to find a stage actor. Now it seems more than a guess that Barbara will be the star and the man will be recruited from the ranks of the unknown.

Louis B. Mayer is that proud of himself for thinking up the idea of glorifying the movie exhibitors—the forgotten heroes of our glamorous industry. Not long ago L. B. assigned Vera Caspary to whip up an original cavalcade of the boys who show the movies to us and the result is "Nickel Show," an opus dealing with the rise of the movie houses to the gilded palaces of today. L. B. is so hepped up about it that he wants Spencer Tracy to play the lead, a movie exhibitor, and this bit of casting certainly ought to make a hit with the "exhibs," who count Spencer among the fair-haired boys at the box office.

Dr. Ben Hecht, who is often called in to diagnose ailing scripts, checked in at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer this week. His case is "The Lady of the Tropics," long ago discussed as a Hedy Lamarr possibility. Now it's her next and will so-star the exotic bride, Mrs. Gene Markey, and Robert Taylor, soon-to-be bridegroom. Knowing how fast Ben works—he is a whiz when he really concentrates—Hedy ought to be facing the camera again within a very few weeks. Very wise indeed to scrap "I Take This Woman," which would have definitely hurt the Lamarr as a box-office attraction and would have been no help to the film company.

History repeaters itself. Ten years ago Columbia stepped out of the quickie class and became one of the major companies. Today Republic, which has led the independents, announced that it would join the major company league and no longer make quickies. All lower budgeted movies will be thrown out, according to Herbert J. Yates, and only features will now come out of the studio. A million dollars has been added to the movies now in production, so I guess we'll just have to forget all the jokes about shooting around the actress who had to leave the room to see a man about a dog.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Rudy Mate's heart may belong to Binnie Barnes but he certainly had eyes for no one but Rita Johnson at the La Conga; Irene Dunne took the train for New York a few hours before her "Love Affair" preview. She and Dr. Griffin go on to Georgia; Sally Eilers and Harry Joe Brown, standing in the rain after dining, jumped into George Raft's taxi and went to the preview with him; Marlene Dietrich, so much blonder than when I saw her last, in a tailored suit; Charles Boyer, Pat Paterson and many others at the preview. Marlene moves into Countess Di Frasso's Beverly Hills mansion when Joseph Schenck vacates March 15; Victor Schertzinger and his attractive wife, 25 years married, celebrated at Santa Anita. Beverly Roberts, who pinned her heart on her sleeve when Peter Kent went to Paris to study art, now stepping out with James Bush; Humphrey Bogart is shopping for a boat and Warners hope he won't do an Errol Flynn; Virginia Bruce dining with her entire family at the Beverly Derby after her strenuous day in court; Mary Brian and Shipwreck Kelly, Hollywood's latest man about town, a dinner twosome, Wesley Ruggles is really going to town on the party he is giving his crew tomorrow night with orchestras, favors and what not; Ann Sothern gets in Monday after a New York visit with Roger Pryor; Alice Faye has only one more sequence to shoot on "Rose of Washington Square" and the minute she is well enough to make that she will do it and then head east to see Tony Martin; Edna James and Eddie Buzzell chop-sueying at Ruby Foo's emporium.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., March 9.—The surprise over Hedy Lamarr and Gene Markey was nothing compared to the reported remark she's supposed to have made over Reginald Gardiner. That she went with him over a year because "he was safe." What a thing to say about the man who introduced you to Hollywood, saw that you went to the best parties, taught you to speak perfect English and built you a swimming pool for a Christmas present.

HEDDA HOPPER

Reggie's pal, the Earl of Warwick, wanted to give her a little present for her house-warming and asked what she'd like. The reply was: "a grand piano."

And Gene Markey, when he came to Hollywood 11 years ago, was engaged to be married to Ina Claire. On the way out he read the news that she had eloped with Jack Glibert. Of course when he arrived, the buzzing could be heard from here to New York.

The day of his arrival I took him to the first Academy Award dinner. The day following, up to the Gilbert home, where Ina made her peace and then she introduced him to the members of her party. So instead of the guesst laughing at him, he laughed with them.

But time marches on, and so does friendship—in Hollywood.

But I'm wondering if Mrs. Gene Markey will have the same glamour as Hedy Lamarr. I doubt it. They took time out at 9 o'clock the night they were married to telephone from the Coronado Hotel to the Arthur Hornblows. Gene got his mother out of bed to tell her the good news.

The week started with a headache after the Handicap and Turf Club ball. Then came the arrival of the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland. Our titles seem to have troub with their turbines—boats, to you. The Earl of Warwick gave the Sutherlands the first send-off, a sit-down dinner for 36. His dining room seats 20 comfortably. Yes, they all got in.

Wonder if Sutherland remembers his visit a few years ago when he called on Kay Francis? He got the right name but the wrong Francis.

Our noble visitors like us so much they won't leave. However, that doesn't apply to the Sutherlands, who pulled out Wednesday.

Whipped down to hear that 8-year-old genius Loren Maazel, who will conduct the Federal Orchestra of 100 pieces at the New York World's Fair. Stokowski, Mamoulian, Alex Steinart and Konrad Bercovici were all speechless at his performance. Conducted without notes and once remarked to the clarinetist, "That should be D flat instead of D natural." The musicians acted as though they were watching a miracle. They were.

Author Bercovici said, "This is certainly God's country, but what with floods, wind and earthquakes God seems to want it back."

Tuesday: Just another day. Preview of "Dark Victory" and Bette Davis again giving an Academy performance. I don't know how they can give her another one, though. Frances Marion partied for her afterward. Also there: Hal Wallis and Louise Fazenda, Producer David Lewis, Eddie Goulding, the Casey Robinsons, Elsa Maxwell and Connie Bennett.

Did you know that Connie is taking care of her maid in her own home, with a trained nurse in constant attendance?

Wednesday: Preview of "Midnight"—one of Claudette Colbert's best. The visiting New York Paramount crowd congratulating Producer Arthur Hornblow because he brought a $1,000,000 picture in on a $1,000,000 budget. Our new high.

Thursday: A day of rest. With a magazine story, a Sunday and a daily column to whip out.

How it could be done with spring in the air, meadow larks singing, mimosa and wild lilacs covering the hilltops, watching a double white hyacinth blooming in my own two-by-four garden is more than I know. Also saw three schoolboys stretch 600 feet of wire across a canyon to set up an amateur wireless station.

Movie Market Short Villains As Need Grows

Villains are at a premium in Hollywood today.

At the moment, in fact, available heavies are scarcer even than leading men—and leading men are scarcer at any given moment than the proverbial hen's teeth, as any casting director eloquently will tell you.

Reshuffling of production schedules by a number of studios appears imminent as a result of the discovery that Paramount has obtained a corner on heavies. This monopoly of menaces is as complete as though it were the result of deliberate maneuvering, instead of just a happenstance.

Greatest army of heavies ever assembled is at work in Producer-Director William A. Wellman's tremendous production of "Beau Geste." Headed by such major menaces as Brian Donlevy and J. Carrol Naish, this villainous group includes Albert Dekker, Harry Woods, Harold Huber, Arthur Aylesworth, Henry Brandon and 30 others.

A dozen villains are at work before the cameras of Cecil B. De Mille's "Union Pacific," including Akim Tamiroff, Stanley Ridges, Robert Barrat, Anthony Quinn and Henry Kolker. Donlevy already has completed his role as villain-in-chief in the De Mille film.

Horace MacMahon and Jerome Cowan head the half-dozen heavies in "The Gracie Allen Murder Case."

These three pictures alone account for 30 of the film colony's villains, and any casting executive will tell you that there aren't more than 50 genuine villains in Hollywood. Several, in fact, currently are working in both "Beau Geste" and "Union Pacific."

After several seasons of overemphasis on musicals and screwball comedies, this shortage of scoundrels indicates that the old-fashioned melodrama has come back into its own, even though occasionally in the form of history.

Villains are in demand for Warner Brothers' "Juarez" and "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," M-G-M's "Sergeant Madden," Columbia's "Outside These Walls" and "Blind Alley," Universal's "Rio" and Samuel Goldwyn's "The Last Frontier."

To top all this, Patricia Morison is a villainess in "Persons in Hiding," from the pen of G-Man J. Edgar Hoover.

* WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, MARCH 11, 1939 17

ST. JOHN'S AND GONZAGA ELIMINATED

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., March 10.

Here it is March 10, and the Cleveland club has not yet run afoul of Judge Landis this season. They haven't kidnapped a single ball player, they haven't phenagled any contracts, and Landis hasn't uncovered an irregularity which might cost the Indians title to one of their stars. The Indians, once habitual offenders of the baseball laws, apparently have reformed.

POVICH

About a year ago, Landis was forced to crack down on the Cleveland club, you may remember. It seems that with a fine disregard for the fact that one Bill Nowak, a college pitcher, belonged to the Giants, Cleveland scouts enticed him from the Giants camp at Baton Rouge, La., and took him to New Orleans, where they put him in an Indian uniform. The Giants squawked and Landis hastily ruled against the Cleveland club, in view of its past record.

It was just about two years ago at this time that the Indians lost title also to a youth who is now rated a $70,000 ball player. It seems that they had Tommy Henrich, but didn't know what to do with him. So they kept him in the minor leagues for three years and then attempted to keep him in the minors for another season. Meanwhile they were giving tryouts to outfielders who couldn't carry Henrich's glove. You can't keep a ball players in the minors for more than three years, even if you have title to him, the Indians found out after Henrich squawked and Landis declared him a free agent.

But if the Cleveland club didn't recognize Henrich's talents, a lot of other teams did. And there was spirited bidding for the young outfielder, who couldn hit so hard and show a pretty turn of foot in the field. Of course, the Yankees won in the bidding. They thought enough of Henrich to offer him $25,000 to sign his name to a New York contract, which Henrich did.

Only Joe DiMaggio Tops Henrich

And at $25,000 Henrich has proven a bargain. The only outfielder on the Yankee team who outranks him is Joe DiMaggio. The Yanks are bringing the sensational Charley Keller up from Newark this year to take a place in the Yankee outfield but he won't take Henrich's place. He'll take George Selkirk's.

And Manager Joe McCarthy counts the acquisition of Henrich as more than ordinary stroke of luck. The Yankees are blessed with a plethora of good outfielders and Henrich is now regarded as the Yankee's insurance against the day when Iron Horse Lou Gehrig breaks down completely at first base. Because Henrich, it seems, is a first baseman as well as an outfielder and can give the Yanks first base protection much in the manner to which they have been accustomed.

Meanwhile the blundering Cleveland club is having a time with its outfielders. They have picked up a bright young star in Jeff Heath but his is the only stable position in the outfield. Earl Averill, at 37, is grumbling and dissatisfied and still a holdout, and the other Cleveland outfielders are Julius Solters, Bruce Campbell and Roy Weatherly, who are not the type to produce any ecstacies on the part of a club manager.

Indians Are Veteran Blunderers

The blundering of the Cleveland club is not of recent date. Fifteen years ago they had a young infielder with New Orleans whom they virtually chased out of a Cleveland uniform. When he held out for a small bonus after getting a tryout with the Indians, the front office turned him down. The New Orleans club later sold Buddy Myer to Washington for $25,000. Three years ago, the late Col. Ruppert, of the Yankees, was on the point of offering $200,000 to the Nats for Buddy Myer. And the Indians haven't had an acceptable second baseman for 15 years.

The most celebrated Cleveland faux pas was, of course, the Bob Feller case. Front office ignorance of the baseball laws almost cost the Indians title to the sensational Feller after he had established himself as the pitching wonder of the era. It seems that Feller, technically, was the property of the Des Moines club when he started pitching in a Cleveland uniform, and Billy Evans knew it.

Evans knew it because at the time when Feller was scouted by the Indians Evans was the general manager of the club. And so when Evans was fired at Cleveland and given a job as head of the Red Sox farm system, he knew that the Indians were vulnerable in the Feller case. Shortly afterwards, the Des Moines club squawked and the Indians were threatened with the loss of Feller.

The richer clubs in the league—the Red Sox and the Yankees—eagerly awaited Landis' decision in l'affaire Feller and were poised to make the youth staggering offers for his contract in the event he was declared a free agent. But in this particular case Landis reversed himself, levied a moderate fine on the Cleveland club and permitted it to retain Feller.

But he did that only because Feller had made known that he would prefer it that way; that he wanted to pitch for Cleveland. It was a generous gesture on Feller's part, because what he was doing was turning down offers from the Red Sox and Yankees that might have gone as high as $100,000. Only to an ill-advised boy's terrific sense of loyalty can the Indians credit their retention of Feller.

On the Line — With Considine

New York, March 10.—Nobody can account for, or see the end of, the great era of sore arms in baseball. Few major league teams now in training do not possess a large and regretful bloke who gives out hourly bulletins on the temperature, pulse and sap line of his flap.

CONSIDINE

The sore-arm masterpieces of the baseball war correspondents receive much more attention than the annual holdout statements. In fact, there is nothing sadder in the entire clime of sports than the holdout boys this year. Every time they open their trap to let out a shrill peal of negation it falls upon ears already deafened by tons of reports studded with such terms as "bone chips," "cartilege scrapings" and "bursitis." A big league pitcher has to have at least one very sore arm a year to maintain his social standing these days. But somewhere in there, there must beblokes who are whinnying with pain only because it's fashionable and arouses sympathy—and bait clubs for the time being, at least, are sentimentally disposed toward owners of sore arms.

We have an idea that if Commissioner Landis stuck out his jaw tomorrow and ordered all players with sore arms consigned to exile from organized baseball, or docked for every day they spent in the dispensary, some of the most miraculous recoveries since biblical times would be recorded.

A Strange Lot of Patients

And though we have moderate faith in the medical profession, we also believe that if the arm slicers and muscle twanging medicos were to go to Siberia tomorrow, the recuperation of their sore-arm patients would not be materially hampered.

Harry Salsinger, the Detroit sports writer, wrung an interesting medical pronunciamento from "Schoolboy" Rowe not long ago. Tired of the doctors, and the "sting" in his arm, Mr. Rowe locked himself in his room, put one hand to his bed and bent his right arm around backward until he was slapping at the left side of his face. Suddenly there was a loud pop, the grinding of anatomical gears and for the first time in months, he says, his arm felt good. What are you going to do with a guy like that? They make a strange lot of patients, many of these ailing pitchers do.

We were born and irregularly reared in the shadow of the greatest pitcher of them all—Walter Johnson, of course. He was brutally misused from the day he joined the Washington team in 1907 until his declining years. One week-end in 1911 he shut out the Yankees on Friday, again on Saturday and again on Monday.

The 'Big Train' Refused to Budge

Joe Cantillon, the manager, wanted to pitch him again on Tuesday, but Johnson put his foot down and wouldn't throw a ball until the sixth inning of Wednesday's game. The big fellow was not permitted to throw a curve until after the war. He'd just rear back and let it fly. He never heard of bursitis. The only bone-scraping job ever done on him was the day Joe Judge broke his leg with a line drive, during batting practice. Johnson must have had a dozen sore arms in his career. But it wasn't the vogue then to glorify it.

Grover Cleveland Alexander told us not long ago that the reason for the abundance of sore arms these days was that kids no longer use their arms as hard as they did in his day as a fun-loving babe. That's a little hard to believe. The probable answer is that two or three really good pitchers by a striking coincidence happened to come down with genuine aches at about the same time. And that a lot of numbskull apers promptly began to "owe" their chronic mediocrity to at least partly imagined aches.

Over 400 Athletes Entered; Governor's Mile Heads Program

By Jack Munhall.

Already running an alarmingly high fever agitated by the combined symptoms of a prevalence of fine talent among its schools in general and the recent accomplishments of Georgetown and Maryland in particular, the District of Columbia's track pulse is expected to skyrocket to the danger point tonight as an imposing array of its cinder aces compete in the third annual University of Maryland-Fifth Regiment games in the Baltimore Armory.

Georgetown and Maryland and Catholic University in the college division of the mammoth carnival and Tech, Central, Eastern, Anacostia, Hyattsville, Montgomery Blair and Washington-Lee in the scholastic section presage many honors and titles for good old D. C.

400 Athletes Entered

In all, more than 400 young athletes from outstanding colleges, schools and athletic clubs in the East, South and West will fire away for recognition in what has rapidly developed into one of the South Atlantic area's finest meets.

The Governor's Mile, won by peerless Glenn Cunningham last year, will headline a program of 30-odd events. Other features are the collegiate 1-mile relay and the Oriole 660.

New York, March 10 (I.N.S.).—They can't budge Budge.

They put the last of the reputable challengers in there with big Don tonight at Madison Square Garden—Britain's Fred Perry—and Budge breezed through him, 6—1, 6—3, 6—0. It was an easier victory than Budge scored over Vines in his professional debut at the Garden in January. It took only 49 minutes.

New York tennis fans, still disgruntled over the listlessness of the last local pro match, and forewarned by to 1-to-5 betting odds that Budge would win, stayed away from the match in droves. Less than 6,000 spectators were in the Garden. No figures on the gate were announced, but it isn't likely that it hit $10,000—even though the court-side seats sold at $7.70 each.

Though he won less than half as many games against Budge than Vines did in January, Perry put up a much stiffer fight tonight than did the lanky Pasadenan in January. The glamorous looking Englishman, who beat Budge three times from 1934 to 1936—when both were amateurs—threw himself into each rally. But there was nothing he could do to stave off the incredible attack of the big red-head from Oakland.

Budge was simply unstoppable. With his great sweeping strokes he bulleted the ball into the corners of the alert Britisher's court from start to finish. Forehand, backhand, serve, smash and volley. Budge pulled them all off with incomparable speed and placement. And against this vigorous all-court game, Perry, the last ob stacle in Budge's path to the final pinnacle of tennis, was dumbfounded and powerless.

The American scored 23 baleful placements and a service ace during the short lambasting match, and kept his errors down to 41. Perry, who had the terrific problem of racing to within swatting distance of Budge's cross-court shots, knocked 13 placements, served 2 aces and had 67 errors.

Carnegie Ties Georgetown For Loop Lead

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 10.—Carnegie Tech tied Georgetown University for the Eastern Conference championship by nosing out a hard-driving Temple quintet, 28-36, in a thrilling game here tonight. The victory gave the Plaid a record of six victories and four defeats for ten conference games, matching Georgetown's similar record.

Tonight's game was one of the closest staged on Carnegie's floor this season, with both clubs guarding closely. Tech led at the intermission, 18-17, and managed to set the pace throughout the final period despite several dangerous Temple spurts.

Bill Reinhart Real Pal, Tips Rival Coaches

If Bill Reinhart is as smart and observant as the coaches of St. John's of Brooklyn and Roanoke College believe, those teams will undoubtedly finish in a tie in their first round game Wednesday in the second annual invitational tournament sponsored by the New York Metropolitan Basketball Writers Association.

REINHART

It happened like this:

George Washington played and lost to Roanoke (twice) and St. John's during the course of the regular season, but those two teams never saw each other. So, being friends of Reinhart and cognizant of his reputation as a thorough coach, the coaches of both schools phoned him long-distance yesterday to get the dope.

At 12:30 the red-faced Reinhart talked with Gordon White, Roanoke coach, revealing to him the weaknesses and forte of St. John's five. Two hours later he blushingly related to Joe Lapchick, the St. John's coach, the items of interest he noted in Roanoke's play.

Knowledge of Spanish Saves Guilani's Job

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., March 10.—The Spanish he learned in college is paying a wholly unexpected but timely dividend to Angelo Giuliani, second-string catcher of the Nats. It may even save his job with the Washington club.

Giuliani, a Milwaukee lad, who quit Catholic University when baseball was abandoned as a varsity sport, has been catching on this ice for the Nats since he was brought from the Browns a year ago. Unimpressive at bat he was only a moderately good understudy for Rick Ferrell.

But his job as a second-string catcher was being seriously threatened here by Jake Early, hefty-hitting backstop from Charlotte. Washington clubs never carry more than two catchers. And the finger appeared to be on Giuliani.

New-Found Importance

Yesterday, however, Giuliani talked himself solidly into the esteem of Manager Bucky Harris. Quite by accident he won new-found importance in the Nats' camp. Harris came upon him in earnest conversation with the Nats' Cuban colony.

"Hey, Tony, is that Italian or Spanish you're sputtering? "Harris inquired.

Giuliani smiled. "Italian, nothing," he said. "I'm giving these guys as good as they send in Spanish. It's down my alley. Learned it in college."

Harris gasped. Surprise was written all over his features. Here in camp was a Washington ball player who was the answer to his prayers. He saw the end of all of his lingual struggles with Roberto Ortiz, Alex Alexandra, Rene Monteagudo and Bobby Estalella.

Spanish Interpreter

Harris threw up his hands and sighed something that sounded like "omigawd."

Giuliani was put to work immediately by Harris as the Nats Spanish interpreter.

With the catcher as a medium the

Fork Union And Danville Are Winners

Johnnies Defeated, 38-33, and Gonzaga Eliminated, 30-28, In Title Tourney

By Bill Burnett.
A Staff Correspondent.

Lexington Va., March 10.—The two representatives from Washington in the second round of Washington and Lee University's fifteenth annual schoolboy basketball tournament were retired from competition today in heated encounters, but the teams engaged were well aware they had been in a battle.

St. John's, thought to have the best chance to enter the semifinal round tomorrow morning, was off to a sorry start and took a 38-33 loss from Fork Union (Va.) Military Academy. In the second game of afternoon play, Gonzaga's Purple basketeers also were off to a bad start, but managed to climb back into the game and hold Danville (Va.) Military Institute to a 30-28 decision.

After one quarter Gonzaga seemed to be hopelessly licked. Red Wynn, brilliant guard of Danville, paced his team to a 9-2 advantage before the Purple got started. The zone defense of the District five, which baffled an inexperienced five from Richmond Academy, Augusta, Ga., yesterday, proved no problem for Danville and it was on the long end of an 11-5 count at the quarter.

O'Brien Gains Lead

Buddy O'Brien gave the underdog a 1-point lead in the second period with three field goals and a foul shot, Gonzaga leading by 14-13.

The game was still any one's as the third session progressed, a split count being the final outcome. Wynn and Capt. Seabolt, of the eventual winners, quickly took a 4-point lead in the final quarter and matched Gonzaga's efforts from there on.

Fred Rice was the lad who kept Gonzaga in a position to win. He sprinkled four neat field goals throughout the game and with Lane O'Donnell, center, led the smooth attack of Gonzaga. In the end it was experience, or the lack of it, that put the little Purple aggregation out of competition.

Wynn, of the victors, was point honor man with 13.

Johnnies Beat Selves

For the first time this season, St. John's was credited with having whipped itself after the Fork Union affair. A first half in which it was unable to drop the simplest shots spelled defeat in the end.

Though ahead after the first ten minutes of grueling action, 6-4, and also on top at the half, 18-1, the "sure" shots missed in the first half would have given the Johnnies an easy 30-16 lead. Martin Hunt, largely responsible for St. John's first-round victory, missed three absolute setups, and Frank Cady, Joe Gallagher and Charley Batchelder chipped in with their share.

It took St. John's about five minuts of the first period to warm up, during which time the lads from Fluvanna, Va., took a four-point advantage. The lead in the second session changed hands rapidly until Gallagher, playing hard but decidedly off stride, rammed a running snowbird in the basket and made good on the foul called on Bob Kammerer at the same time. That gave St. John's its two-point rest-period advantage.

Virginians Pull Away

With the count tied at 21-21 midway the third period, the lengthened periods (St. John's is accustomed to 8 minute periods instead of 10, which are in effect during all games after the first round), seemed to tell on Washington's delegation. Norman Laughlin, Dick McElwee and Bob Erickson tallied in that order for the Virginia State Prep champs who nipped G. W. High, of Alexandria, yesterday and the fagged Johnnies could never get closer than three points thereafter.

Gallagher, sparking the team as usual, tried desperately to pull his club wihint striking distance, but something was missing.

Munhall is Good

The only substitute used by Johnnie Coach Gene Auguster, Herbie Munhall, pulled a big surprise with his defensive play.

Little Jimmy Mulvihill, one of the scrappiest members of the Johnnie crew, turned in the best point total, 9, and Gallagher, contributed 8. McElwee, of Fork Union, was high for the game with 13 points. A big factor in the Cadet's victory was the fact that they missed but one of the 7 foul shots allowed them.

The first overtime of the tourney occurred in the night session when Greenbrier Military School, of Lewisburg, W. Va., led most of its game with John Marshall High, of Richmond, was caught at the end, and fiinally won after 1 minute of the "quick death" period, 17-15. Ovid Matthews, Cadet substitute, turned the trick with his only field goal of the game, a circus pivot shot.

Class fairly oozed from the defending champion, Durham (N. C.) High, as it bounced over the rugged

Patsey Begone, Don Meade Up, Wins Tropical Park Purse

Gayset Takes Place Money After Battle

Pumpgun Shows, Five Lengths Back; Meade Gives Winner Smart Ride in 6 Furlongs

By the Associated Press.

Tropical Park, Fla., March 10.—Patsey Begone, consistent six-year-old mare representing J. Y. Pyle, received one of Don Meade's best rides and won the featured fifth race, a six-furlong dash for above the ordinary platers, here this cloudy afternoon. William Wick's Gayset trailed the winner by two lengths after a long duel. H. E. Enger's Pumpgun landed the show, another five lengths away.

The first two horses were split choices at $1.85 to one dollar, although actually a few dollars more was wagered straight on Gayset. No public choice had been able to get down in front in the four previous events on the program.

A shower that fell shortly after noon failed to slow up the track. Patsey Begone completed the distance in 1:12 2-5. It was Meade's second victory at the meeting, he having broken the ice the day before by finishing in a dead heat.

It was a thrilling contest most of the trip. After a good start, three horses drew off from the others and raced along as if harnessed together. Cruising, Gayset and Patsey Begone was the order as the trio sprinted to the first turn. Cruising was first to crack. Gayset and Patsey Begone pulled clear and the result was in doubt until Patsey Begone spurted in the last furlong and won with ease. Meade had saved something for the stretch run, while Gayset could not stand the strain of his earlier efforts. Pumpgun ran over Cruising after turning for home.

Following the pace under wraps to the top of the stretch, the $6.40 for $2 favorite, Modest Queen, easily chalked up a four-length victory in the sixth race, another 6-furlong affair. Lee S. was a fatigued second by a half-length. Red Time and Billabong finished in a dead heat for the show.

The latter, away tardily, was taken around the leaders leaving the backstretch, gradually bettered his position and would have won in a few more strides. GOLD KNIGHTESS, in tight quarters, responded to pressure when clear and easily disposed of the others. ONLY SON broke slow, but closed a big gap.

CHARMED ONE, displaying good speed while being steadied in front, shook off BRIERTON entering the stretch, but was ridden out briskly to the finish. MUGGINS, on the inside in the early stages, swung around the leaders in the last quarter mile, closed gamely and wore SWEEPING FLAME down in the closing strides. SWEEPING FLAME, well up on the outside the entire trip, finished stoutly and had no excuses. BRIERTON, away fast, went in near pursuit of the leader in the early running, but quit in the final furlong.

Daily Double, Broadkill and Charmed One, Paid $136.10.

THIRD RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $800. For maiden 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 2:58. Off 3:00. Winner, Ramsey and Croan's b. c. BUCKET HEAD, on the outside, forced a steady pace and raced SIGNAL FLARE into defeat in the early stages and drew out into a winning lead entering the stretch to win as his rider pleased. PREDESTINED worked her way up on the outside and shook off BEAU INSCO in the final drive. BEAU INSCO gradually improved his position on the inside and moved up stoutly at the furlong pole, but faltered. CO LARMES broke greenly and was pocketed on the inside until midway around the turn, was taken to the outside and moved up strongly, but was pinched back in the stretch run.

FOURTH RACE—Four furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For maiden 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:27. Off 3:30½. Winner, Darby Dan Farm's ch. c. DARBY DIENST, away forwardly, went around the leaders with a rush after going a furlong, drew out into a good lead at the furlong pole, but was ridden out briskly through the stretch. MADAM CAPET, a keen factor throughout, swung around the leader on the stretch turn, closed gamely, but could not better her position. BOY BABY, vigorously urged, bettered his position gradually on the extreme outside and wore WELDING down in the final drive. WELDING, quickest to begin, went prominently early, but faltered in the final furlong.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:58. Off 4:01½. Winner, J. Y. Pyle's dk. br. m. PATSEY BEGONE, going in close attendance of the leaders while saving ground in the early stages, drew out under strong pressure through the stretch, but was taken in hand nearing the finish. GAYSET broke alertly, assumed a short lead in the early running, but faltered in the last furlong. PUMP GUN gradually bettered his position while saving ground and disposed of CRUISING through the stretch. CRUISING, on the outside and in near pursuit of the leaders for about a half mile, weakened badly the remainder of the trip.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:27. Off 4:30. Winner, Snow White Stable's b. f. (3), by Burgoo King—Belitin. MODEST QUEEN, going in improved form, took command at her leisure and won with speed in reserve. LEE S., vigorously urged, showed the most speed, but faltered through the stretch and just lasted to withstand the challenge of opponents. RED TIME, slow to get going, was compelled to overcome repeated early interference, but closed fast on the inside through the stretch and but failed to overhaul BILLABONG. The latter, well up all the way, was weakly ridden in the final drive and Snider almost tossed the show off.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:59. Off 5:00. Winner, Mrs. L. V. LEARNED, away forwardly, was held in tight quarters on the inside the first half mile, was taken around the leader leaving the backstretch, took command at his leisure and won in hand. MISS LIZZIE, rushed to the front, saved ground while setting the pace, but was no match for the winner. TAUNTON gradually bettered his position after leaving the backstretch, but could not overhaul the leaders. BLACK PETER and LOWRY were under vigorous pressure most of the trip.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 5:28. Off 5:31. Winner, Motor City Stable's gr. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CANDY HERO, $11.70, $5.80, $4.10; WULFSTAN, $3.50, $3.00; CHATTERPOL, $3.10.

CANDY HERO, prominent factor and saving ground until well around the lower turn, was taken around the leader and, moving up with determination, drew out in the final furlong to win in hand. WULFSTAN held his opposition safe for speed and, rated in front under light restraint, held on with good courage when challenged, but was no match for the winner. CHATTERPOL and MANLY, outrun in the early stages, responded gamely to punishment through the stretch and finished with a rush.

At The Post

Tropical Park, March 10.

Dear Al: My friend, Charles Burke, of St. Louis, has just sent out his future-book odds on the Kentucky Derby. They contain no sensations. El Chico is quoted the favorite at 8-1. Challedon, the Maryland-bred hope of W. L. Brann, is held at 10-1, along with Technician. Jamestown and Benefactor are 12-1, with Porter's Mite, Xalapa Clown and Impound down at 15-1 shots. T. M. Dorsett and Ariel Toy are on the list at 25 and Hash at 30. The remainder of the field can be had virtually at your own figure. They range from 40-1 to 1,000 to 1. These wagers, or commissions, as Burke likes to call them, stand whether or not the horse starts. He did well on the $100,000 Santa Anita when Seabiscuit went lame and was forced out. Seabiscuit had been quoted as high as 4-1 at one stage and that drew in the heavy dough. Bowie has mailed out its ist of officials for the spring meeting to open on March 30. The line-up seems to be the same as last year. William L. Harron, Marshall Cassidy and George Brown, jr., are the stewards; J. B. Campbell, John P. Turner, sr., Edward J. Brennan and J. H. Anderson are the judges; James Milton is the starter, and William Jennings is the timer. Campbell doubles as racing secretary and handicapper in addition to other duties. Don Meade had many chances here during which he failed to bring home a winner and the bubble seems to have burst for those who pacged it on the line every time Meade went to the post. Those who were trying to double on him bit the dust unless they had a printing plant turning out $20 bills. Any old-timer will tell you that the quickest way to go broke is playing the jockey instead of the horse. However, there are "jockeys for horses" as the expression goes. Certain horses run better for certain riders, but few boys can keep a winning streak going more than a month or so. If you are a close follower of racing you can remember a time when almost any given jockey had a period in which he seemingly couldn't miss. If you are lucky enough to follow a boy and then quit him at the right moment you can cash. One Benningite has suggested that I send an expedition into the Everglades to find Clocker Mike. He says he had a dream that Mike had joined a tribe of Seminole Indians. I can picture Mike shooting craps for beads. BILL.

First race—Moss Gal breaks off the rail with 103 pounds in the saddle and she may lead this pack to the wire. Apprentice Nash will do the booting and the price should be right. Fast Express will have Meade up and this pair is due respect. Ebl's has come a long way since Charles Town and could be in the pay circle. Art Brown's Rise and Shine horse should be out of the money.

Second race—Wha Hae seems to have a shade the best of it in this open race. He will have to be at his best to hold such as Chowning Glory and Ladfield safe. The last-named likes this track and scored at the outer town.

Third race—General Howes may hold this crew safe. He has worked well and will have the hard-riding kid, Ashcroft, in the saddle. Oklab is on the reserve list, but will be dangerous if in action. Flying Car and Weebag are possibilities.

Fourth race—Merry Gesture gets 6 pounds from Rock Maker and this pair are likely to finish in the order named. Peters will handle the top one and he means business. Sugarage gets in with only 103 pounds and thus rigged will be due some respect.

Fifth race—Pasteurized, despite the 122-pound burden, looks like the goods in the day's feature. Don Meade will ride and I see no reason for mistakes. Warlaine is good now and needs only to run back to that recent fine effort to be a keen contender. Francesco should go well.

Sixth race—Passing Eve did about everything asked at Hialeah and should do well over this track. Gets in light for this and I believe Ashcroft will get her home on top. Oddesa Lad has speed and will be forwardly placed. Bertillon is going to get up with one of those stretch rushes and is dangerous.

Seventh race—Continuity has been rested and goes for a new owner. Favors this track and may be the right one. Bow and Arrow is a tight fit with Seventh Inning for the place award.

Eighth race—Texas Rose, with 103 pounds aboard, meets only so-and-so company in this event. I'm going to string along. Brilliant Rock and Panorama to fill out the money bracket.

Best bet—Pasteurized.

Boyd Coaches Roosevelt; Woodworth Shifted to Central

Shift Ends Months of Dickering

Artie Will Assume Duties Monday; Both Principals Pleased

Lynn Woodworth, for 15 years athletic director and head football and track coach at Roosevelt High School, and Arthur C. Boyd, physical education teacher at Central and since 1932 a successful coach in track, basketball and football, will exchange positions Monday, it was learned last night.

The shift, rumored since February, when Boyd was moved from Eastern to fill a vacancy at Central created by the retirement of beloved Bill Foley, was verified by Principals May P. Bradshaw and Larry G. Hoover, of Roosevelt and Central. They declared the transfer was effective Monday, although the required approval of the high school has not yet been obtained.

Months of Dickering

Boyd's going to Roosevelt, according to those familiar with the situation, ends months of dickering for his services by Miss Bradshaw, who is said to have asked for him when he was sent to Central. The Roosevelt principal, a keen sports fan, is known to have been deeply disappointed at the school's continued failure to win an inter-high title in any major sport.

For Woodworth his new position is the fulfillment of his own wish—to be given full time to concentrate on physical education training in which branch he is recognized as an outstanding expert.

Boyd, under present arrangement, will assume all of Woodworth's former duties, while Woodworth will unofficially head Central's physical education department, it was revealed by Hoover.

Principals Satisfied

Principals Bradshaw and Hoover as well as the coaches were well satisfied with the exchange which in baseball parlance, is called "a straight player for player swap."

Boyd, a local boy, attended Tech High School and the University of Maryland, achieving singular athletic recognition. Though small and even slight of stature, he was regarded as one of the greatest basketball players Tech ever produced. At Maryland, too, he carved a deep niche for himself athletically, winning varsity letters in football, lacrosse and basketball, although he never was quite able to make the regular eleven.

Graduated from Maryland in 1927, he made his debut in public high school athletics at Tech, serving as basketball coach. He remained there until February, 1935, when he was transferred to Eastern to become football and track coach. There he enjoyed great uccess, winning in 1935 the school's first Inter-High football championship.

Boyd is a well-known basketball official in Washington.

Noted Instructor

Woodworth, a former star athlete and highly touted physical education developer, came here in 1922 to accept a position at Langley Junior High. He served as director of physical education there until 1924, when the school was moved to its present site and then was promoted to Roosevelt.

He is known to be an especially capable handler of boys and organizer of athletics, although his coaching success was mediocre at best. He is credited with having inaugurated a summer school for coaches at the University of Indiana in 1921, his only year in the physical education department at that university.

He received his master's degree in physical education at George Washington University. He also attended Chicago Y. M. C. A. College, in addition to Indiana, where he won honors in football, basketbill and track and captained the boxing team. He retired from the ring undefeated in two years.

White Sox Pennant Hopes Brighten

Jimmy Dykes Possesses Belief Chicago Club Will Come Through

By the Associated Press.

Pasadena, Calif., March 10.—It's a little early to get excited over the possibilities of the Chicago White Sox, and it may be too late along about next September, but it is safe at this date to announce there is a fine display of hope around the Chisox training camp.

It may not be based on anything as sound as Luke Appling's leg, but it is a great, patriotic hope; almost spiritual, like a prayer.

The very efficient James J. Dykes possesses this hope, or prayer. It's the same one he's had ever since he went to work for the White Sox, and it should be a first-class, finished product, by this time.

As for the changes of the White Sox climbing out of the second division, it apears that Manager Dykes has been provided with the following:

A pitching staff open to slight skepticism and robbed of its most valuable member, Hard Luck Monty Stratton; a regular catcher whose identity must remain a secret at this time because even Dykes can't name him; a fair outfield, and an infield plagued by miseries.

Dykes says his regular outfield will be Gerry Walker, Mike Kreevich and Hank Steinbacher.

Virginia U. Trackmen May Retain Title

Good Distribution Of Material Again Give Cavaliers 'Edge'

By the Associated Press.

Charlottesville, Va., March 10.—The University of Virginia Cavalier track team looked forward today to retaining its State championship with what appears to be one of the best balanced squads in recent years. The six dual-meet schedule opens here April 1 against Dartmouth.

Coach Archie Hahn, who has tutored the Cavaliers for 10 years, said he had a good distribution of material in both running and field field events.

Holdovers in the sprints are Jimmy Banta, junior letterman from Richmond, and Don Dayton, brother of Lang Dayton, last year's track captain. They will be supported by Frank Mas, of Richmond.

Two Soph Stars

Capt. McChesney Goodall, of Staunton, is a standout runner in the middle distance events, along with Charles Wheeler, a senior letterman, and Curtis Hannum, second-year squad member.

Slated to join Edwin Holm, of Norfolk, junior letterman, in the 2-mile hike are Charles Chamberlain and Lawrence Forsyth, sophomores.

Wit hmuch of the team's strength lodged in the hurdles events, Frank Fuller, Armistead Peyton and Harvey Poe, holdovers from last year, will be helped by Stanley Lyman, a sophomore up for his first year of varsity competition.

Returning for the broad jump will be Edward Lowrance, who dominated the event as a sophomore last year, and in line for the high jump are Bill Perry and Sidney Vernon, both sophomores, who have cleared 6 feet. Another topflight contestant in the jumps may be Ted Sharretts, depending on his academic status.

Power in the shot an ddiscus probably will be supplied by Arthur Bryant, Lee McLaughlin and Albert Frerotte, all football players. Bryant had an undefeated season as a heavyweight boxer, and worked at the weight for the varsity squad last year, while McLaughlin and Frerotte are sophomores. McLaughlin approached 45 feet with the shot indoors.

Back for the javelin throw are Harry Dinwiddie, Walter Jones and Tom Yancey. Dinwiddie, whose passing was a feature in football for three seasons, topped the group last year with 186 feet.

Bobby Preston, of Richmond, a punior letterman with an altitude record of better than 12 feet, is the chief pole vaulter. The schedule:

April 1, Darimouth at Charlottesville; 8, V. M. I. at Lexington; 15, North Carolina at Chapel Hill; 22, Davidson at Charlottesville; May 2, William and Mary at Williams- 13, State meet at Richmond; 20, Navy at Annapolis.

Baering Down

BY ARTHUR BUGS BAER

We feel pretty much the same way as Congress does about Guam. If an island entirely surrounded by water hasn't got a harbor, then it doesn't deserve one.

It's the only time anybody has been refused an appropriation since grandma first put sugar on green apples. But it's a good sign and means that the improvements are about to stop and recovery is about to begin.

We got Guam, Puerto Rico and the Philippines in 1900 for $20,000,000. Canada is smarter about its islands. It has a thousand of 'em. But they're all in one spot.

Sophomores Backbone of Virginia Nine

Coach Says He Will Depend 'Heavily' on Newcomers This Year

Charlottesville, Va., March 10 (AP). Coach Gus Tebell said today he probably would lean heavily on his sophomore baseball candidates in developing the University of Virginia team for the current season opening March 29 against Rutgers.

Although he will have eight lettermen returning to uniform, Coach Tebell said there probably would be a shortage of pitching arms, but there were good prospects from last year's undefeated freshman nine.

Full-day workouts will not start until the 10-day examination period is finished, Examinations started this week.

One of the brightest prospects for the 1939 squad is Bill Harman, expected to see duty behind the plate on the strength of his performance with the freshman team last year. Charles MacKenzie, a letterman, is the leading reserve candidate.

Coach Tebell said he planned to build a sophomore infield around Jim Gillette, of football fame, who will carry over in his position at first base. Billy McCann, also just out of basketball, is the tentative selection for second base, with Arthur Hitch and Jack Hine the leading choices for short. Luke Gosney, of Danville, a letterman in football, was first call at third.

Jimmy Sargeant, team captain and infield star for two seasons, will be relieved for an outfield post if the newcomers make good. A native of Charlottesville, Sargeant was the team's leading hitter last spring. He also held a first string end position in football for three seasons.

Other lettermen available for the outfield post are Louis Redavid and Peter Nistad, with Jimmy Dodson and Sereno Merrill, the leading sophomore candidates.

Two Richmond boys, Joe Pinder and Frank Nichols, are the squad's only experienced pitchers. Pinder was used in the infield and outfield last year besides taking a regular turn on the mound, while Nichols earned a letter as a relief hurler.

Slated for a pitching role is Truman South, middleweight boxing standout, who shared an outfield position last year. With Harold Brosnan, ace freshman pitcher last year, missing, the only otther immediate prospects are Bob McAlpine, of Portsmouth, and John Willey, of Machipongo.

The Cavaliers will play a two-game series with each of the State's Big Six schools, as well as North Carolina.

The schedule:

March 29, Rutgers at Charlottesville; 30, Haverford at Charlottesville.

April 6, Vermont at Charlottesville; 8, Yale at Charlottesville; 10, Richmond at Richmond; 12, Michigan at Charlottesville; 15, North Carolina at Charlottesville; 18, V. M. I. at Lexington; 22, William and Mary at Charlottesville; 26, Washington and Lee at Charlottesville; 29, North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

May 1, Davidson at Davidson; 3, V. M. I. at Charlottesville; 6, Washington and Lee at Lexington; 8, V. P. I. at Blacksburg; 10, Richmond at Charlottesville; 13, William and Mary at Williamsburg; 18, V. P. I. at Charlottesville; 20, Navy at Annapolis.

Massanutten's Tankmen Set Early Pace

Lead Contestants in Title Meet; Uhrich Breaks Record

By the Associated Press.

Blacksburg, Va., March 10.—Swimmers of Massanutten Military Academy set the pace in preliminary heats in five events of Virginia Tech's interscholastic tank meet here today.

Massanutten, defending champion in the open class, sent entries home in the fastest times registered in trials in the 50, 100, 200 free style events and the 100-yard back stroke and 100-yard breast stroke.

Uhrich, Massanutten back stroker, cracked the pool record, setting a mark of 1:08.2 that clipped six-tenths second from the time established by Shepard, of Duke, in 1937. Billy McClintic, of Massanutten, who competed in last year's meet under colors of E. C. Glass High, of Lynchburg, looked impressive in winning heats in the 100 and 220 free style events.

Honor of placing greatest percentage of entries in the finals went to Fishburne Military School, Waynesboro, which placed 12 out of 14, by agreement of Coaches Hardman, of Massanutten, and Ousley, of S. M. A., outstanding breast stroke entries, placed in finals without competing this afternoon. Meet officials look for the fast field in the open division to crack a number of pool records in the final events, which begin at 3 Saturday. Competition in the State class between teams of Jefferson High, of Roanoke; Pulaski and Waynesboro promises good performances also.

QUALIFIERS, open class preliminaries, 50-yard free style—Hobert (Massanutten), Heard (Massanutten), Blood (Fishburne), Heimovitch (S. M. A.), Bernie (Massanutten), Beloff (S. M. A.).

100-YARD BACKSTROKE—Uhrick, Anderson and Clark, all of Massanutten; Sherman (S. M. A.), Lambert (Fishburne).

Covington Boxers Pace Field In South Atlantic Tourney

Devitt Prep Draws Three Byes in Prelims; Allman Is Standout; Three Knockouts

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fort Defiance, Va., March 10.—Chalking up five victories in the preliminary bouts, Covington School's mittenmen paced a large field of scholastic ringmen here this afternoon in the twelfth annual South Atlantic prep and high school boxing tournament. The program attracted a sizeable audience to Augusta Military Academy's gym, and capacity crowds are expected tomorrow for the finals.

Devitt Prep, of Washington, advanced to the quarter-finals without so much as lacing on a glove by virtue of a lucky draw. The District school has three representatives in the tournament. Clark School, Lane High School and Augusta trailed Covington in victories, scoring twice in the preliminaries.

Three knockouts—all in the 135-pound class, featured the bouts, which were hard fought and generally close. Mirchich knocked out Lombardy, of Fork Union, after 1 minute and 15 seconds of the third round; Holloman, of Covington, flattened Persinger, of Loormoor, after 1 minute and 35 seconds of the first round, and Stephenson, of the host school, floored Polk, of Fork Union, after 1 minute and 15 seconds of the third round.

Cadet Allman, of Augusta, gave one of the cleverest exhibitions of the day in winning over Barts, of Barboursville. The 14-year-old 60-pounder boxed in masterful fashion, winning all three rounds by wide margins and without getting a single solid blow in return. The results:

80 POUNDS—Whitehead (Covington) outpointed Johnson (V. I. C.; Allman (A. M. A.) outpointed Barden (Barboursville).

130 POUNDS—Dudley (Clark) outpointed Kelley (V. I. S.); Workman (Loormoor) outpointed Casey (Clifton Forge).

135 POUNDS—Kardon (Lane) outpointed Dent (Charlotte Hall); Gibson (Covington) outpointed Louis (McGuire); Mirchich knocked out Lombardy (F. U.), 1 minute 15 seconds third round; Holloman (Covington) knocked out Persinger (Loormoor), 1 minute 35 seconds first round; Libby (Covington) outpointed Torrence (McGuire); Stephenson (A. M. A.) knocked out Polk (F. U.), 1 minute 15 seconds third round.

The Warrenton boys, who proved just a litti etoo powerful for their close rivals, will meet Upperville for the league title, probably next week.

G.W. High Picks All-Opponent Cage Team

Eastern High Players Ignored in Balloting For 1st Team Berths

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, March 10.—Virginia Class A Conferenc erivals earned four of the five berths on the all-opponent quint selected by the George Washington High School varsity five for the school paper, and announced by Sports Editor Billy Carn etoday. No team placed more than a single player on the first five.

The forward positions wen tto MMorris Grosman, of John Marshall High, Richmond, and Hal King, of Hopewell; Ed Marshall, of Petersburg, was selected for the pivot post, while Les Hooker, of Thomas Jefferson High, Richmond, and Al Horner of Robert E. Lee High, Staunton, were named for the guard berths. The latter school is a Class B contender.

Unanimous Choice

King, of Hopewell, who topped the Class A Conference in scoring during the past campaign, was the only unanimous selection.

Eastern High, of Washington, which defeated the Presidents once during the regular season and again in the opening round of the Metropolitan tournament, was ignored in the balloting for first-team positions, but placed three on the second five. They were Hancock and Cooksey, forwards, and Mills, center. Others named on the second team were Ed Johnson, of R. E. Lee, and Doyle, of Petersburg.

George Washington and Maryland University freshmen teams, both of which met and defeated the Presidents during the past season, were not included in the balloting.

Players taking part in the vote included Eddie Nowland, Stan Heflin, Jack Payne, "Dinky" Scott, Eddie Snyder, Amos Clift, Jimmy Taylor, Pete Drury, Jim Worden and Lick Latsios.

Three Senior League games have been scheduled for tomorrow night at the Alexandria Boys Club gym, starting promptly at 8 o'clock. The schedule follows: 8 p. m.—Fort Hunt CCC vs. Kendrick Flashes. 8:40—Alexandria Boys Club vs. Potomac Firemen. 9:30—Alexandria Light Infantry vs. Columbia Firemen.

In the opening tilt, the Fort Hunt five can take undisputed possession of first place by winning over the Kendrick five, defending champions in the loop. A loss for the Flashes will eliminate them from any chance of gaining a berth in the post-season championship tournament, scheduled to start the evening of March 21.

Agriculture and Highlander Girls Meet In A. A. U.; 10 Other Games Scheduled

Jewish Community Center vs. Y. M. C. A.—that's the feature game of tonight's program in the District A. A. U. championship basketball tournament being sponsored by The Washington Post at the new Eastern High School gymnasium, Eighteenth and East Capitol streets. Natural rivals, these teams have produced some of the best basketball seen in past tournaments and some sparkling action will be the order when they take the floor tonight at 9 o'clock.

This is one of 12 games on the program for today and tonight, making the largest display of basketball ever offered here in 24 hours. Court heroes and heroines will battle it out to escape elimination in their fight for The Washiugton Post Trophies and the individual A. A. U. medals.

24 Teams In Action

From the 90-pound boys to the unlimited men, 24 teams are ready to do or die for "old so-and-so A. C." And as if the variety of sizes of the male players isn't enough, a girls' game will hold the attention at 8 o'clock when the Agriculture Girls clash with their fair tossers from Georgetown, the Highlanders.

Two other games are on the night card, admission to which is a mere 25 cents. At 10 p. m., Cal's Vale will take the floor to meet the Regal Clothers. The Cal's have been playing good basketball this season and will be ready to tackle the Heurich Amateur League representatives. In the opening clash at 7 p. m., the Y. M. C. A. 120-pounders face the Anacostia Community Center Boys Club.

The afternoon show should be a classic and admission has been reduced to a nominal 10 cents. The youngsters, who have all the dash and fire of their older brothers, will fight it out in eight games. The massive Eastern floor is divided into two sections for these games and two will be conducted each hour starting at 1 o'clock. These 90 and 105-pounders play good basketball. With the 10-cent admission, the stands should be packed with the backers of the little rivals.

Big League Atmosphere

The "little" games will be conducted in big league fashion. The majority of teams represent local and suburban boys clubs.

The J. C. C.-Y. M. C. A. Blues game should be a thriller. The 16th Street five is coached by Everett Russell, former Tech and Heurich star. Russell has been working hard with his club and expects them to put up a keen battle. The "Blues" are one of the two teams entered by the Y. M. C. A. in the unlimited class. The large squad at the "Y" contained so many good players that the coaches divided them for the tournament.

Suffolk Downs Given 18 More Racing Days

Boston, March 10 (AP).—The Massachusetts Racing Commission today granted 18 additional racing dates to Suffolk Downs track, but failed to act on the petition of Outdoor Amusements, Inc., for a license to run a 37-day meet at Westport.

Suffolk already had been granted 42 racing days, from May 15 to July 1. The new days are from July 3 to July 22, giving the track 60 weekday racing dates.

Royal Mail Winner In Black Vine 'Chase

Down In Front

With Richard Vidmer

Miami Beach, Fla., March 10.—The square-shouldered, flat-nosed man in the yellow beach robe stretched his stocky muscled legs out into the sun, looked up, grinned and said:

"I'm leaving tonight, going north. And it seems kind of funny. For 18 years I've been coming South at this time of the year."

"Do you miss

"Do you miss the training camps?"

VIDMER

"I didn't think I would," was the reply. "But after you've been in a game so long, it's hard to give it up all at once, but I'm through. I don't want to go back into baseball. I have a wonderful business opportunity and four or five years from now it probably wouldn't come again."

This was Gordon Cochrane, Detroit automobile supply man, speaking. But he always will be remembered in the sphere of sports as Mickey Cochrane, the greatest catcher the game ever has produced, in the judgment of many.

Sixteen years ago he came bounding out of Boston University, where he had been a one-man terror on the football team. A year in the bushes, another in the Pacific Coast League, and he reported to the Philadelphia Athletics, a young, aggressive and ambitious rookie eager for the big opportunity in baseball. Last summer he severed his connections with the game, resigning as manager of the Detroit Tigers, but in the intervening 16 years he experienced about every thrill and emotion the game has to offer.

He played with a perennial last-place club, helped it climb into the first division, helped to win three consecutive pennants and went on to lead another team into two World's Series as manager.

COCHRANE

"The greatest satisfaction of all was winning the World's Series in 1935, though," Cochrane thought, Cochrane nodded. "When we won those three pennants with the Athletics in 1929, '30 and '31 it was exciting. And when we won the pennant the first year I was manager at Detroit I was naturally pleased. But looking back, the greatest satisfaction I ever got was when we beat the Cubs in '35.

"We came up with some good players right around that time. Marvin Owen, Pete Fox, Hank Greenberg, Jo-Jo White, Schoolboy Rowe. That's what wins pennants for you; getting a lot of good players along about the same time. You can't buy 'em; they just have to com eto you and it's more luck than money tha tmatters.

"I hear them squawking about the power of the Yankees again and how they're wrecking the game. That's a lot of foolishness. The Yankees are a great ball club and they've had mighty good fortune in finding player to step in when they were needed. But to a large extent that's a matter of luck. The Yankees had just as much money back of them from 1928 to 1936, but they didn't have th eluck with their young players.

"Why look at the Cardinals a few years ago. It seemed that whenever they needed a man they just dpiped int otheir farm clubs and grabbed a star. They have just as big a farm system now, but no matter how deep they dip they just can't seem to get what is needed."

Nats

Nats manager held a special coaching session for the Cubans this morning. Points of pitching technique which Harris had been helpless to explain were relayed to Alexandra and Ortiz by Giuliani. At the end of the session, Harris was jubilant.

"Now, we're getting somewhere," said Harris. "But can you imagine this Giuliani in camp for nearly two weeks and I out there tongue-tied with the Cubans around. He could have saved us a lot of time and trouble. We have to send to Tampa for Al Lopez when we've got a Spanish-speaking catcher on our own club, and don't know it. Ye Gods!"

Job Now Secure

The bright possibility for Giuliani is that his catching job will be secure because of his lingual talents. Harris has indicated that he will turn over to Giuliani the job of handling Ortiz and Alexandra in practice and exhibition games.

"They're green and they'll have more confidence if they know they can talk to the catcher," Harris pointed out.

"It's a struggle for Rick Ferrell to get his signals across to them, but Giuliani shouldn't have any trouble. And if either of 'em develops, Giuliani may get a steady job out of all this.

Win Intramural Basketball Finals

Intramural basketball finals for three classes in Leland Junior High, Chevy Chase-Bethesda, were won last night by Sections 7-E, 8-D and 9-F.

Section 7-E, captained by Dick Maury, defeated 7-B, captained by Brooke Farran in the tightest game of the night, to to 8.

Bill Schenke led his 8-D five to an 18-to-5 victory over David Fitzgerald's 8-B quintet.

race in which at least three entries are conceded a winning chance.

Chronister Favored

Maryland's lanky Mason Chronister, who vaulted into national recognition last year by placing third in hte event, is expected to again be in the thick of contention. Chronister and Jim Kehoe, also of Maryland, and Missouri's John Munski are best liked in a field which includes Phil Graves, New York A. C.; Dave Morrison, North Carolina, and Gerald Tarrant, Penn A. C. All of these entrants, with the exception of Kehoe to whom the event is new, have covered the distance in 4:20 or better.

Kehoe, normally a 2-miler, gained a host of supporters by his performances in the Southern Conference championships and in the more recent Catholic University games.

Choice in "600"

Kenneth Lyden, Georgetown University freshman, has been installed the favorite in the Oriole 660, but he'll have to beat an unusually formidable field, particularly Vincent Healy, Navy; Jack Harley, Lenox A. C., and Bill Hendrix, North Carolina. Also entered in this event are Dick Belton and Stuart Reeves, former Georgetown students, from Penn A. C., and Bob Condon, of Maryland, who is running unattached.

The collegiate one-mile relay, surprise thrill of last year's meet, looms even more exciting with strong teams from Maryland, Georgetown and Navy, matched against two of the South's better quartets, Duke and North Carolina.

Maryland will be the defending champion but the Terps will be only a third choice behind Georgetown and Navy, both of which have been cutting a wide swath in Eastern track circles. There is every possibility that a new record, surpassing Georgetown's 3:25 mark of 1937, will be established.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Gertrude Clarke Whittall Foundation in the Library of Congress presents Adolf Busch and Rudolf Serkin Thursday night in a recital of music for violin and piano. Program: Sonata in D minor, Op. 108 (Brahms), Sonata in D major, K 306 (Mozart), Sonata in A major, Op. 47 (Beethoven).

Coolidge Auditorium could not accommodate all the music-lovers who flocked to the Library of Congress last evening to hear the last of the three sonata recitals by Adolf Busch and Rudolf Serkin. Those foresighted persons who had secured their places long in advance and those fortunate tardy ones who crowded the anteroom constituted an audience so spell-bound and so considerate of the players' concentration as to refrain from applause between the movements of the sonatas. And how difficult that restraint had been was evident in the ovations that burst forth at the end of each work.

The remarkable unanimity of these two musicians in their rhythmic flexibility, their dynamic shading and their emotional variability is the principal source of one's profound satisfaction with their collaborative artistry. Whatever hours of rehearsal and discussion have been involved in the preparation, the effect is that of perfect consentience on every detail of interpretation. They play with an agreement that amounts to a temporary fusion of personalities.

Their offerings at this final appearance were all familiar compositions, but the intensity of the performance made them sound fresh and glowing as though they were being disclosed for the first time. The program began with the D minor sonata of Brahms, rich in ideational content and radiant with romantic fervor. This was followed by the pellucid D major sonata which Mozart wrote in his twenty-second year—that eventful year of the last journey to Paris and the death of his mother who had accompanied him to France.

The parting work was Beethoven's A major sonata, the so-called "Kreutzer," which just falls short of being a masterpiece. It begins on a scale of emotional urgency and technical splendor unmatched in any other work of its kind, but the emotional temperature drops in the second movement where the attention is held not so much by the power of inspiration as by the executive grace and beauty of the variation, and the concluding tarantella is a rhythmic feat that bears no spiritual relation to the rest of the work. In fact, it was originally the finale of the sonata in A flat, Opus 30.

The sonata suffers from a dichotomy which prevents it from being an integral whole. The difference in emotional tension between the beginning and the end makes one feel that a tragedy has turned into a comedy, that Paolo and Francesca have been replaced by Figaro and Susanna.

There is a practical explanation for this lack of uniformity in the texture of the sonata. It was written for the mulatto violinist, George Augustus Polgreen Bridgetower, who had come to Veinna from England with letters of recommendation that led to a friendship with Beethoven, and it was written in haste to fill a promise that Beethoven made to aid the newcomer in a concert. Ries relates that Beethoven summoned him at 4:30 in the morning of the concert day and asked him to copy the violin part of the first allegro quickly.

The piano part was merely sketched, and in the performance that day Beethoven played from the fragmentary notations, while Bridgetower had to play the second movement from the manuscript because there had not been time to copy it. Contemporary reports say that the first performance was received with laughter at the extravagant manner of the violinist. Bridgetower lived to be nearly 80, dying in London in 1860, and in his later years he told Thirlwell that the sonata had carried a dedication to him, but that before he left Vienna he had a quarrel with Beethoven, who re-dedicated the work to Kreutzer.

Content to Merge With Zuckerman, Pioneer Brokers

New York, March 10 (AP).—Two of the Nation's oldest brokerage houses—H. Content & Co. and Henry Zuckerman & Co.—will merge April 1, it became known today. Both have been in operation more than half a centry.

Harry Content, who will be senior partner of Content, Zuckerman & Co., is the "old master of Wall street" who holds the oldest membership on the stock exchange, a seat he purchased in 1885. His father, Noah, was in Wall street before him.

The head of Zuckerman & Co. is Paul S. Zuckerman, who has been a member of the exchange since 1927 and whose father founded the firm. His grandfather was a broker in the days of Noah Content.

Harry Content has the reputation of having handled more of the accounts of the fabulous old-time plungers than any other man active today. Among his clients have been John W. "Bet a Million" Gates, James R. Keene, Thomas W. Lawson and William C. Durant.

Wheat Steady, But Business Lags in Pit

Large Argentina Surplus Hangs Over World Markets

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 10.—The stalemate in the international wheat trade restricted business in all world grain markets today, resulting in stationary prices here and abroad.

Importing interests refused to expand purchasing beyond barest needs pending development of a more definite idea as to what Argentina will do to market her large surplus. At the same time, exporters, Argentina included, showed no signs of willingness to dump wheat on the world market even though the movement of most grain now offered importing nations is being subsidized in one way or another.

Trading here was almost entirely of a commercial nature, with placing and lifting of hedges against elevator and mill business holding prices to a range of only ⅜ cent. Outside speculative activity was not in evidence. Prices dipped as much as ⅝ cent at times but there always was enough buying to absorb the quiet selling.

Wheat closed unchanged to ⅛ higher compared with yesterday, May 68, July 68⅛@68¼; Corn ⅛ to ⅜ higher, May 48⅜@48¾, July 50¼@50⅝; Oats unchanged to ⅛ up; Rye unchanged and lard unchanged to 3 cents higher.

Power, Motor, Copper Shares Lead Advance Treasury and Rail Bonds Go to New Highs SEC Abates Rigid Short Selling Rules

New York, March 10.—Consistent leadership by utility and motor shares and strong recovery in coppers which had been severly depressed Thursday on Chilean news, featured a firm session in stocks today. A higher close and the third successive day on which transactions were substantially in excess of a million units were achieved without benefit of knowledge that the SEC has acted to relax the rigid short-selling rules. The announcement came a few minutes after activities on the floor of the exchange had ended for the day.

Bonds enjoyed another five hours of agrressive investment and speculative buying with the Government list and scores of rail liens establishing new highs for the year or longer. Brazilian loans, which came into prominence Thursday on announcement of trade treaty plans and debt pyament proposals, were again in the limelight being traded to the extent of more than $2,000,000 at rising prices.

Foreign exchanges were generally up against dollar exchange as news from Europe indicated progress in avoidance of war. The stalemate continued in wheat, which was unchanged to ⅛ up. Cotton firmed 4 to 5 points. Copper futures, unsettled at the start, closing strong.

In big board trading, the 100 key stocks again recorded a new high for the current move, ending 0.27 point up for the day. Rails and rail equipments were somewhat backward in contrast to firmness of the group in the bond section. Aircrafts sagged in consequence of disarmament talk abroad. Oils did a little better and store and food groups were well supported. In most sections realizing sales were absorbed with little effect on quotations.

Motors in Demand

General Motors added ⅜ and with Chrysler and a number of others in the auto section equaled or bettered old 1939 highs during the trading period. Buying in this direction was attracted as Ward's reported a gain in assemblies to 84,094 units from 78,705 last week and 57,438 a year ago. The 45 per cent improvement over the 1938 comparative is less impressive when the depressed condition of the industry and business in general a year ago is considered. Ward predicts, incidentally, that factory output of motor cars for the second quarter will be 80 per cent up from the like 1938 period.

Steels were inclined to be dull and little changed in price. The only important news of the day affecting the group was the figure on February shipments of finished products by U. S. Steel Corporation which showed a somewhat larger drop from the January total than the Street had expected. Steel common was off fractionally and Bethlehem ended slightly higher.

Wall Street's reaction to the SEC modification of short sale rules will, of course, be reflected in tomorrow's market providing no other important influences make their appearance.

Brazil's Bonds Jump

Brazilian dollar bonds soared in excited trading on the listed market today on publication of the full terms of the arrangements made in the Washington conferences between Foreign Minister Oswaldo Aranha and Administration officials.

Other Latin-American default bonds also were in eager demand, but Brazilians easily headed the group with gains of 4 to 7 points. The market generally was firm and new tops for the year were numerous in domestic issues. Turnover was $11,820,000, which is the best figure for 1939.

Direct issues of Brazil were in best demand and the largest gains were registered in such obligations. State and municipal Brazilians were almost equally improved. The turnover in issues of that country exceeded $2,000,000 face value. Peruvian bonds were in heavy demand, while Chileans moved up on a smaller turnover, as did Panama bonds and various others. European default bonds were dull. Czech bonds advanced among the medium-priced interest payers, and gains appeared also in Italian and Polish issues. Best-grade foreigns did well.

United States Government issues continued their upswing, with gains ranging from 1-32 to more than a point. Guaranteed bonds of the Farm and Home Corporations joined the movement. Firmness prevailed among best grade utility, railroad and corporate bonds.

Gold Importations $38,305,001 in Week

Gold imports increased slightly, to $38,305,001, in the week ended March 3. The previous week's total was $32,017,662. The Commerce Department said receipts in the March 3 week included $11,192,542 from the Netherlands, $20,142,403 from England, $2,111,223 from Colombia, and $1,235,313 from the Philippines.

Silver imports were about the same as usual at $1,704,564, including $909,132 from Mexico and $226,398 from Japan.

Steel Shipments Ahead of Year Ago

New York, March 10 (AP).—Shipments of finished steel products by United States Steel Corporation subsidiaries in February totaled 677,994 tons, a decrease of 111,311 tons from 789,305 in the preceding month but 203,271 more than 474,723 in February last year.

Shipments in the first two months of the year amounted to 1,467,299 tons, against, 993,045 in the comparable 1938 period.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press.

London, March 10.—British gilt-edged securities continued firm in the stock market today despite some week-end profit taking. Motor shares advanced, and irons, steels and domestic rails were in demand. The upward trend in the industrial section was checked somewhat in late dealings, but prices remained steady. Foreign bonds improved while transatlantics finished irregular.

Paris.—The bourse closed irregularly today with rentes 15 to 60 centimes up. Suez Canal advanced 70 francs, and Royal Dutch was off about 60 francs.

Liverpool.—Cotton futures today advanced sharply and closed 4 to 15 points higher, following Thursday's New York rise on the Senate committee's approval of the Smith bill. There was speculative buying and covering in old crop months. Steadiness in wheat futures reflected smaller Southern Hemisphere shipments. Demand for actual wheat was negligible, however. Off ¼d. old March contracts established a new low for the season while other months were ¼d up.

Corporate Tax Burden Often Exceeds Profit

Oil Company Levies Reach Higher Total Than Wage Item

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser
International News Service Economic Commentator.

New York, March 10.—American business is adding to the great clarification of the public mind as to how the wheels go round through the notable trend toward simplification of corporate accounts.

The new short form reveals that corporations, which are devices for combining savings for the purchase of better tools and equipment, are instruments which take in funds through pleasing their customers to the extent of getting orders. The proceeds from sales are then largely redistributed to labor in wages and to Government in taxes. Only a small percentage on the average is retained as so-called profit, which might more accurately be described as a wage payment for the use of tools.

This new "candid camera" shot method of corporate reporting discloses that the rise in the tax rate has brought about a quiet economic revolution. Corporations, in addition to being in part vast consumer co-operatives, have become in effect to some measure instrumentalities of State socialism. This latter is the case because numerous companies nowadays pay out more in taxes than they earn for owners. This is consniciously true of railroad corporations.

Working for Government

The Borden Company recently disclosed that in 1938 its total taxes were just a shade under the total net income available for stockholders. Each amounted to about 3.1 per cent return on sales.

In the case of the oil companies, which collect heavy excise taxes, the amounts taken from customers to be redistributed as taxes exceed the wage item.

In 1890, the average American worker gave the product of one day's work out of 14 as his tithe for the upkeep of Government. By 1937, the spending was at a rate to take about the product of one day's work out of four. This means that human workers only work part time for themselves and their families and the rest of the time toil for Government.

By the same token, the iron slaves of industry, the machines of the corporation, only work part time for their owners—the stockholders—and part time for the Government.

Wider recognition of these fundamentals accounts for the growing tax consciousness throughout the land. Now that every gainfully employed person is beginning to understand that the governmental spending spree has been at his expense, it becomes politically desirable for public men to give assurance of "no new taxes."

Taxes Insufficient

But that is not enough. Taxes in recent years, no matter how onerous, have been insufficient to pay the bills of the governmental spenders. It is necessary to relate economy on the spending side to the pledge of tax restraint.

Obviously the various units of Government are entitled to taxes. The current clamor is to restore the "take" of Government to normal ratios to the incomes of citizens.

With the realities catching up with us, there is no important barrier to national progress except containing maladjustments within the internal price structure. Raw material prices are still disproportionately low as compared with those of finished goods. Better balanced relations would enable goods and services to circulate through the economic arteries of the Nation without interruption.

Wrigley 1938 Net $3.82 Per Share

Chicago, March 10 (AP).—William Wrigley, Jr., Co. reported today consolidated net earnings for 1938 were $7,653,780, equal to $3.82 a share of capital stock after provisions for depreciation and taxes. This compared with 1937 income of $8 743,590, which equaled $4.37 a share.

Net 1938 earnings were charged with the regular dividend of $3 a share and three extra dividends of 25 cents each. These dividends amounted to $7,347,990. Excess earnings over dividends paid, to be added to earned surplus, totaled $305,790.

Pullman Co.

The Pullman Co. reported today for December, 1938, a deficit of $1,411,045, compared with a profit of $810,275 for the same month in 1937. Net for the 12 months ended December 31, 1938, after taxes, was $1,502,997, compared with $4,219,117 in 1937.

Cotton Futures Are Higher With Textile Demand

New York, March 10 (AP).—After two sessions of fairly free swings the cotton futures market returned to a narrow range today, but finished on the credit side by 4 to 5 points. Despite mixed sentiment on the chances for an early agreement on legislation to ease the cotton surplus problem, trading circles were more hopeful than a week or two ago.

Seen as a rise of confidence in this direction was a sharp expansion in demand for cotton cloths in the Worth street market. The gray goods division topped the activity of any recent day with a turnover of around 25,000,000 yards in print cloths alone. This raised the week's total to an estimated 60,000,000 yards. Some orders placed today were at prices fully three-eighths of a cent a yard above low levels of a week ago.

U. S. Trade in Latin America Holds Firm

Great Britain Suffers Brunt of Germany's Drive for Business

New York, March 10.—United States exporters are holding their own in Latin America and Germany is not walking away with our trade—"It is England who has felt the major burnt of German competition" according to a report of business conditions in Latin America issued today by Goldsmith Shore Associates, world markets specialists. The analysis is based on a six months' survey.

The analysis points out that while the United States so far has not lost any of its share of sales to Latin America, yet potential threats to this supremacy exist in at least eight important countries in this area. It also stresses the vital need for American foreign traders today to acquaint themselves not only with sales conditions, but with the general business situation, fundamental financial factors, laws and decrees and other new developments which may influence events in Latin America in the near future.

Favorable to U. S.

The survey maintains that with the exception of the expropriation question in Mexico, Latin America was never better disposed toward the United States. "In the face of Germany's aggressive trade campaign in Latin America, especially during the past four years, it is heartening to record that American exporters are not at the present time losing ground. A United States sales decrease of 12 per cent ($75,000,000) was shown for 1938, but this drop was not mainly due to competition from other countries, but because the United States experienced a business slump, which reduced our purchases from Latin America by $220,000,000 in 1938.

"Germany has won second place in sales to Latin America from England. This has been accomplished in spite of the fact that, for the area as a whole, England buys a greater share than Germany. This again shows it is not any general law of bi-lateralism that is operating, but the powerful force of Germany's managed economy, using such arbitrary devices as barter, long credits, and aski marks."

British Gold Reserves Gain $500,000,000

London, March 10 (AP).—The gold reserves of the Bank of England showed an increase of nearly $500,000,000—on paper—today as a result of the currency and bank notes act of 1939, which became effective yesterday.

The revaluation of the gold bullion provided an increase of £94,425,000 in the worth of the gold on hand. In addition, the bank purchased £5,567,000 in gold to increase the gold stock valuation by £99,992,000. The Bank of England statement now lists the gold bullion on hand at £227,416,000.

Wharton School Dean On Phila. Reserve Board

The Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System announced yesterday the appointment of Alfred H. Williams, Dean of the Wharton School of Finance, University of Pennsylvania, as a class "C" director of the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia for the unexpired portion of the term ending December 31, 1941.

"Private Lives" Gives Low-Down on Robert H. Jackson—This Sunday

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Human Element

Even more important than knowing the bidding and playing tendencies of your partner and opponents is knowing and understanding their personalities. If in the short time that is allowed you in a bridge game, you can size up the character traits of the players and realize what motivates them, you can to a large extent control the course of the game.

We do not mean an outward display of bossiness; to the contrary the most self-effacing, mild-mannered person of the group can be the leader of it, but whether he is or not depends upon his awareness of the other personalities and his use of this knowledge.

A fine example of this is illustrated in today's hand taken from a rubber bridge session.

South just "cut" into the game. West and North were still bitterly quarreling over the deciding hand of the previous rubber, and North was carrying the argument. It seemed that he could not say enough cruel things to West who fought back with words of selfjustification, each time.

Then the bidding of today's hand began. It was easy to understand North's redouble—its very intonation told that it was merely another thrust at West. The redouble was a personal matter, far removed from the problem of the hand. Whether North's cards justified it or not, made not the slightest difference.

The hand was played out and South went set two tricks for a loss of 500 points, as the hundred honors were deducted. A bad start, any rubber bridge player will agree.

Today's Hand

Neither Side Vulnerable
EAST DEALER

♠ 7 5 2
♡ A K 6
◇ 10 5 4 3
♣ 9 8 6

♠ 6 4 — ♠ A
♡ 9 5 3 — ♡ Q J 10 8 4 2
◇ A J 9 2 — ◇ Q 7 6
♣ Q 10 4 3 — ♣ K 5 2

♠ K Q J 10 9 8 3
◇ K 8
♣ A J 7

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♡	3 ♠	4 ♡	4 ♠
5 ♡	5 ♠	Dbl	Redbl
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: 9 ♡.

North, still chafing under the hurt of the previous rubber and sorely disappointed at the outcome of the hand, for in some strange way the result vindicated West for the previous loss, rushed at South with a mouthful of criticism.

"You shouldn't have gone to five," he scolded. "You should have passed it around to me," and as he talked he worked himself up into a fine fury.

Now, South believed he was justified in bidding five—even if the result was bad. Whether he actually was or not is not important here. South, as was natural, wanted to tell North that he believed five was the right bid and that he thought the redouble was inexcusable, but being a psychologist, he replied:

"You are probably right. I probably should have passed."

The rest of the words that North had ready to hurl, froze on his lips. His mouth opened and shut, and no more was said about that hand.

Before the end of the rubber North was laughing and calling West a "good scout." And South, well, when he added up the score after deducting the 500 point set, he had 1,500 points to spare.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

THE slight, bespectacled Representative from the Fifth Georgia District, Robert Ramspeck, stood true to form before the audience in the Labor Department Auditorium Thursday night. It was to preach a conservatism in action while carrying, as he does, the label of the employes' friend and the reputation of getting things done for Federal employes.

This makes for a cramped and sometimes uncomfortable situation for Ramspeck. For his reputation is wide, his works are known and of such a man many popular conceptions become current. People go to hear him speak, and some expect to see stride upon the platform a swashbuckling fellow carrying a gigantic and symbolic quill, dripping ink for many legislative enactments aimed at employe betterments. Such a reputation as he has creates pictures—and some luckless misconceptions.

Invariably—as on Thursday night—Ramspeck talks conservatism of action, and invariably without regard for such philosophies toward aggressiveness as the sponsors of the meetings may entertain. His attitude becomes at once apparent: he is no believer that the world can be made over in a night and he has a profound respect for the viewpoints and wishes of the Fifth Georgia voters who sent him up here.

And withal, it may be seen that he is not unmindful of his reputation as the employes' friend, for he says, parenthetically at times, that in his nine years in Congress he has done what he could for their welfare. But then the eyes will squint down, as from a Georgia afternoon sun, and he will say such things as:

Some of my constituents think that Federal employes are pretty well off when comparison is made with the conditions of some of my constituents . . . I can't get too excited over this five-day week proposal for Federal employes. Those here work only 39 hours a week and that wouldn't hurt anyone. Some of us do 84 or better on the Hill . . . But understand me as not holding with excessive hours when the Government is insisting on maximum hours for private industry . . . I think there should be some sort of appeals system for employe grievances, but I am opposed to setting up a separate agency for this . . . I think that employes should be careful in stating their wants to members of Congress; they should treat Congressmen with a proper deference . . . And employes should not forget that we have to go home and justify everything we do, sometimes to country people who think the salaries and conditions of work up here are pretty good.

This is the sort of talk he does all the time; it was nothing new from him on Thursday night. And that's the sort of talk, proceeding from his own good judgment, that must make his situation dreadfully uncomfortable at times and his reputation as the employes' friend a little difficult to bear.

For he has such unshakable notions of how things should be gone about; he is so plainly disillusioned of any hope of remaking things in a night; and coupled to these elements are the knowledge of all he has done for Federal employes and the things he still might do if they don't push him too fast.

So his spot must be uncomfortable at times as he looks over audiences that know his label (but not him so well) and expect to hear a ranting and raving. He must wonder, at times, what they are thinking as his drawl indicates that he is a servant also of the Fifth Georgia voters and the citizens of the country, generally. He must in those times dislike the label of the employes' friend. But he should know that nobody has ever held his converatism of action against him. What he has accomplished through that very method is too well known and his courage is too impeccable.

Bob Burns Says—

From now on, I'm sure gonna feel like I've done a day's work after peckin' away at my typewriter. Scientific tests out in Cleveland has jes' proved that the average typist works harder an' puts out more energy than a ditchdigger. They claim that hittin' them typewriter keys thousands of times a day is tougher on you than eight hours of diggin' a ditch.

So, next time my wife chides me about my killin' so much time at the typewriter, I'm gonna say, "Well, how about this typewriter a-killin' me? An' I want you to know, woman, that I'm a real laborin' man now . . . It's a man-sized job findin' the keys I want to hit, an' even a harder job strikin' 'em after I find 'em! If you'd like a nice, easy job, go out an' dig that ditch to drain off the garden. I'll jes' stick here an' finish off the heavy work!"

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

The Double Escape

The danger you have safely met
You fear no more, so just forget.
—Longbill the Woodcock.

Longbill the Woodcock had returned from the Sunny South too early. Anyway that is what Bobby Coon told him when they met in a swamp and Longbill complained because that night Jack Frost had returned and was freezing the ground. You see, Longbill lives chiefly on worms and grubs that he finds in the ground by boring and probing for them with that long bill of his.

"Don't think you are the only one having a hard time to find enough to eat," said Bobby Coon. "Almost everybody around here is having a hard time just now. It was silly to come up here so early when you didn't have to."

"What did you do through the winter?" asked Longbill.

"Slept," replied Bobby Coon.

"And now you are having a hard time to get a living," retorted Longbill. "Do you know what?"

"What?" asked Bobby.

"It was silly of you to wake up so early. Yes, sir, it was silly of you to wake up so early," declared Longbill.

"I couldn't help it. I didn't do it purposely. And when I awoke I couldn't go back to sleep and stay asleep," growled Bobby Coon.

"No more could I help coming north when I did. I had to. Something inside me made me," replied Longbill. "I wish it hadn't," he added.

But the next day when Jack Frost had withdrawn and jolly, round, bright Mr. Sun had softened the ground again Longbill felt better and went about in the little swamp probing the ground by boring holes in it with his long bill, and now and then finding a worm.

He didn't get enough. No one got enough to eat in these in-between days, these days between real winter and real spring. When he couldn't find worms by boring in the soft earth he sometimes helped out by finding grubs and other things under leaves. And always had to be on the watch for those who would rejoice over a Woodcock for dinner even though he were a pretty thin Woodcock.

As he bored in a place that looked as if there should be worms there he heard light footsteps. You or I probably would not have heard them at all they were so light. Longbill withdrew his bill and crouched on the ground. All about him were dead brown leaves and brown and black twigs. As Longbill squatted there close to the ground he didn't look like a bird at all. No, sir, he didn't. He looked so like the leaf and twig covered ground about him that he seemed a part of it.

The faint footsteps drew nearer. In the dusk appeared Reddy Fox. Reddy was moving lightly, swiftly, first a little way to the right, then a little way to the left, his nose to the ground. This is called quartering. Every few steps he stopped for a second or two to look all around and to test the air with his nose. It was clear that he knew that Longbill was around there or at least had been very recently.

Longbill squatted there with his feathers drawn close to his body so as to hold in his body scent. Never once did he take his eyes from Reddy Fox. Reddy was almost passed when suddenly he turned and moved straight toward Longbill. In an instant Longbill was in the air, Reddy making a useless leap after him.

Up over the tops of some tall bushes and between some trees Longbill flew. Behind him a big dark form on swift but silent wings shot after him. It was Hooty the Owl. Longbill saw him. You know his large eyes are far back on his head. I suspect that they may enable him to see behind him. Hardly had he cleared the tops of those bushes when he dropped quickly down among some alders. Hooty couldn't follow. And Reddy Fox couldn't find him again although twice he passed very close. It was a double escape.
